Indians Block Sports Fishing

SQUAMISH (CP) — The Squamish Indian band has closed some prime steelhead fishing areas in British Columbia to sports fishermen.

The band has moved to control all fishing on streams on the 24 reserves it holds in North Vancouver and up Howe Sound and the Squamish River north of Vancouver.

Nineteen of the reserves are on the Squamish River, which every year draws hundreds of fishermen for the prized sea-run trout that swim upriver with the salmon.

A bylaw passed by the band last November and approved by the federal Indian affairs department gives the band control over the waters on the band reserves and some sports fishermen have already been prevented from fishing on reserve waters at the mouth of the Capilano River.

"We have to ensure the future preservation of our salmon stocks," said Dave Jacobs, the band fisheries co-ordinator.

"It's hard for some Europeans to understand the cultural ways of the Indians but that's what it's all about — protecting our culture."

Sports fishermen caught fishing the waters can be fined up to $100 in provincial court, Jacobs said.

At present, there is no official plan regarding enforcement of the bylaw but the Squamish band council is considering the matter and is expected to issue a statement in about a week.

Jacobs said he will meet with the federal fisheries department before the band takes any further steps.

The bylaw gives the band absolute control over management of all waters on the Capilano, Squamish and Seymour reserves as well as smaller reserves, some of which are not populated and are used for grazing.

The band has no control over waters outside of reserve boundaries, said Jacobs.

Jacobs said earlier this week that Squamish Indian band fisheries officers have already stopped several sports fishermen from fishing at the mouth of the Capilano but these fishermen were not charged with violating the bylaw.

3,000 ISLAND LOGGERS LAID OFF

Heat Closes Forest Firms

Layoffs in Vancouver Island's forest industry passed the 3,000 mark Friday and almost all logging operations were closed as continued hot, dry weather offered no relief from an extreme fire hazard situation.

Many logging roads and all hiking trails on the lower part of the Island were closed, as well as two of the major regional parks in the Greater Victoria area.

"We're starting to reach pretty well tinder-box conditions," said H.G. Doerkson, fire protection officer for the ministry of forests.

But although conditions on Vancouver Island were described as more severe than elsewhere in the province, where about another 1,000 persons are laid off because of the dry weather, there was only one major blaze covering about 100 acres of slash near Duncan.

By late Friday the fire was reported to be in the mopping-up stage, with about 55 to 60 firefighters involved.

"There are a number of small fires in other parts of the Island but none of any real consequence," said a spokesman.

Across British Columbia there were 99 fires burning, with about 800 men on the fire lines.

A spokesman for the Langford forest ranger's office, responsible for the Gulf Islands, all unorganized territory in the capital region and west as far as Sombrio Creek, reported a fire-free situation but said some "hot spots" where there had been recent fires were being kept under close surveillance.

She advised hikers and picnickers to use extreme caution if they are likely to be in wooded areas this weekend.

A MacMillan Bloedel spokesman in Vancouver said 12 Vancouver Island divisions employing more than 2,300 men were closed down Friday, with about 200 contractors' employees in the Port Alberni area also affected.

The only divisions unaffected by fire hazard closures were Port McNeill on the northern part of the Island and Kennedy Lake in the Alberni area, but the spokesman said Port McNeill was "iffy" by Friday.

The Caycuse operation of B.C. Forest Products Ltd., which had been operating at reduced levels since Monday, instituted an almost total closure Friday although a small crew was still engaged on dry-land sorting. About 225 employees have been laid off until the fire hazard is reduced.

"It's the driest we've seen it in years," said a spokesman.

BCFP's Port Renfrew operation has been virtually shut down since the end of June, but for the first two weeks of July the 290 employees had their annual holiday brought forward from August.,

Manager Bob Beard told the Times it was decided Thursday to suspend all operations including road construction until the situation improves. About 285 men are affected.

Beard said the main logging roads from Port Renfrew to Shawnigan and Port Renfrew to Cowichan Lake remain open.

Only a few mechanics and dry-land sorters were still working Friday in the Ladysmith and Nanaimo Lakes operations of Crown Zellerbach, where 250 have been laid off.

Victoria parks director Cliff Bate said the wooded areas and pathways in Thetis Lake Park have been closed at the request of the Langford fire ranger, and only the main beach area remains open.

East Sooke Park, where a small fire that broke out Thursday was contained, is also closed.

A spokesman for the provincial parks branch said all hiking trails in the Malahat district covering the southern part of Vancouver Island and the Gulf Islands are closed, and no open fires are permitted.

"You can camp and you can picnic but you can't light a fire and you can't walk anywhere," the spokesman added.

Air Crash Kills Five At Pender

A single-engine float plane crashed on take-off in Bedwell Harbour on Pender Island today killing all five persons aboard.

Names of the victims, believed to be Americans, have not been released.

A Rescue Centre spokesman said the plane, a privately owned Cessna 185, left Renton, Wash., this morning on charter to Rivers Inlet.

He said the plane landed in Bedwell Harbour to clear customs, but was redirected to customs in Pat Bay.

He said the plane apparently developed engine problems on take-off, crashed into the water and flipped over.

The mishap occurred shortly after 10 a.m.

A Coast Guard hovercraft and two other rescue boats as well as numerous pleasure craft raced to the area.

The plane, submerged with only the tip of its pontoons showing above water, was towed towards shore.

Ferries Running During LRB Probe

Both labor and management of the B.C. Ferries have pledged to keep the system operating normally while the Labor Relations Board investigates their dispute.

In binding orders announced Friday the LRB told the ferry corporation it must delay plans to suspend 27 employees until the LRB has determined whether the disciplinary action is appropriate.

The LRB also directed both sides to stay on the job.

Union president Shirley Mathieson said she was pleased the LRB had entered the dispute and workers have been advised to comply with the orders.

Employees had threatened to walk off the ferries to protest disciplinary actions by the corporation.

The threat came after B.C. Ferries general manager Charles Gallagher announced his intention to suspend union terminal chairman Bob Peacock for three months and 26 other union workers for three days for walking off the Queen of Coquitlam for four hours.

The union said it took the action to protest last of corporation action on union requests for additional staffing during the busy season.

Gallagher said the walkout was not justified and he ordered the suspensions, which were to begin Monday.

Instead, special LRB officer Bryan Williams will begin his investigation Monday and the suspensions have been delayed.

In announcing the LRB's decision to intervene, chairman Paul Weiler said:

"In view of the recent industrial unrest on the vessel Queen of Coquitlam and the board's clear sense that further work stoppages may well be precipitated — which would be in the interests of neither the corporation, the union, the employees, nor most important of all, that of the general public travelling on the ferry system — the board has decided that this is an appropriate case to impose binding interim conditions on both parties.

"The board wants it to be clearly understood that these conditions are legally mandatory."

SIGN CLAIMS BOYS GUILTY

VANCOUVER — Four boys aged seven to 10 have been publicly branded shoplifters by a Vancouver store — even though they have not been charged.

Their names are listed prominently on a cardboard sign just inside the entrance to Phil Tarn's Salvage Bargain Store at 1458 East Broadway.

The handwritten sign says: "This store is off limits to the following for stealing." The boys' full names are listed below. The name of a fifth has been scratched out.

Store owner Phil Tarn said Friday night that the list has been up for three months and claimed he had approval of all four boys' parents.

"We are not a kangaroo court here," he said. "The father of one of the boys knew they had been stealing from my store and brought all of them to see me.

"He wanted me to do something ... A lot of customers say its a fantastic idea."

Tarn denies it is against the law to publish names of juvenile delinquents.

B.C. Civil Liberties Association president Jim Dybikowski said Friday: "This kind of thing is bad enough in the case of adults but these are juveniles and are subject to the juveniles delinquency act; he (Tarn) is wrong in his interpretation of the act.

"Section 12, subsection 3, says no report of a delinquency committed or said to be committed shall be published without the consent of the court. On the face of it, this list amounts to publication of their names."

106 Guerrillas Slain By Rhodesia Troops

Times News Services

SALISBURY — Government troops have killed 106 nationalist guerrillas, including an unspecified number shot following a massacre by guerrillas of 39 black civilians in eastern Rhodesia, the military reported today.

The bulletin gave no other details and a military spokesman would not specify when the guerrillas were killed. It is reliably understood, however, that all died within the last 24 hours.

The guerrilla casualties are the largest number killed within Rhodesia to be announced in a single communique since the start of the six-year war.

Nationalist sources indicated the civilians killed were supporters of Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole, one of the moderate black leaders in the interim government rejected by the guerrillas. They were killed at a rally held by Sithole's faction of the Zimbabwe African National Movement in the Wedza region 130 kilometres east of here about two weeks ago, the sources said.

Meanwhile, Prime Minister Ian Smith today is considering the sharp rebuff given to his majority rule agreement by white voters in a Salisbury election Friday.

In the Highlands North constituency, Smith's Rhodesian Front party slumped to take only 49 per cent of votes cast, while opposition parties showed improvement.

If the result were to be reflected in the whites-only referendum promised by Smith on his plans for a transition to black majority rule, the plan would be rejected.

WESTMOUNT SWITCHES

MONTREAL (CP) — It was a squeaky-tight vote but the city fathers of affluent Westmount have decided behind closed doors that Queen Elizabeth can have her Quebec maple syrup after all.

But they've cut Her Majesty's supply from the 10-gallon gift sent for the last 18 years to 2½ gallons.

At a closed-door meeting Monday, city council members voted 4 to 3 to reinstate the royal tribute in a less expensive manner.

Talks Resume

STE. ANNE-DES-PLAINES, Que. (CP) — Negotiations resumed at maximum-security Archambault Institute this morning between prison officials and two convicts who have been holding four hostages at knife-point since Thursday.

Two Held In Store Robbery

Two men — one wanted for escaping the Jordan River prison camp — are in custody charged in connection with the robbery Friday afternoon of a grocery store in Esquimalt.

Roland Alexander Clermont, 23, no fixed address, and William Robert Lowe, 28, appeared in provincial court this morning and were remanded to early next week for plea.

They are jointly charged with armed robbery. Lowe is also charged with being unlawfully at large from jail.

Esquimalt police said the pair was arrested at 4 p.m. about half an hour after two men walked into Cheung's Low Cost Grocery, 811 Esquimalt, and, brandishing a knife, forced the proprietor to hand over about $100 from the cash till.

A nearby resident saw a man dart into an apartment on Carrie.

Four officers, guns drawn, entered the building and found Lowe in one of the suites. He surrendered without struggle.

Clermont was nabbed walking on Colville Road about a block away.

Sooke RCMP identified Lowe as one of two men who walked away from the Jordan River camp late Tuesday night. The other was John Paul Sunstrum, 22, who still remains at large.

Another Draw

BAGUIO, Philippines (UPI) — World chess champion Anatoly Karpov and challenger Viktor Korchnoi battled to yet another draw today in the third game of their championship series.

Sunfish Found Adrift

A 32-foot troller sought by police since last Saturday's massive marijuana bust near Tofino was found Friday partially submerged in the inner reaches of Hotham Sound in Jervis Inlet near Powell River.

RCMP Superintendent Scotty Gardiner said the Sunfish was discovered around noon adrift in the middle of the sound, its bow out of the water, by employees of a small logging company operating in the area.

Gardiner said there were indications an attempt had been made to scuttle the boat which slipped past police and armed forces personnel in thick fog during last weekend's raid in which 13 tons of high grade Colombian marijuana were seized and 15 persons arrested.

Theatres Shut, Still Talking

Both sides were studying proposals this weekend aimed at ending the projectionists' strike at Odeon and Famous Players theatres in B.C.

The projectionists struck at noon Friday, putting all but two movie theatres in Victoria out of operation.

Only the Towne theatre on Douglas and the Quadra at Quadra and Hillside are not involved.

Famous Players manager Doug Gow, chief negotiator for the theatres, said talks have not broken off. He said proposals presented Friday by both union and management were being studied over the weekend.

A total of 86 B.C. theatres are affected in the first full-scale strike since projectionists organized 64 years ago.

The 113 members of the B.C. Projectionists Union went on strike in a dispute over wages and automation, which they say could cut out half the available jobs.

The employees were in a legal position to strike July 14, having served 72-hour strike notice the previous Tuesday. However, at that time they said no action would be taken pending further talks.

Negotiations resumed Friday, but had continued only a short time before the walkout took place.

The union's contract expired June 30 and a new contract is not covered by federal wage controls.

Indians Act On Tahsis Mill Pollution

GOLD RIVER (CP) — Area residents and workers at the Tahsis Co. Ltd. pulp mill here say they have been breathing noxious fumes from the mill for the past 10 years, but now the local Indian band has decided to take action against it.

The Nootka band council passed a resolution this week to enact a bylaw restricting contaminants from the mill, which sits on band-owned land near their homes at this community on Vancouver Island's west coast.

"Since 1973, we have tried other quiet means of resolving this problem, but have made no headway," said band chief Mary Johnson. "We are extremely concerned about health problems suffered by our people that appear to be linked to massive environmental contamination."

Paul Griffiths, Tahsis Co. technical assistant, said the smoke stacks of mill pump out clouds of saltcake, fly-ash, steam, soot and gas mixtures of hydrogen sulphide, chlorine dioxide and bivalent sulphur compounds.

He said a mixture of sulphur dioxide and other sulphur compounds is produced at an average of 800 parts per million (ppm) a day, and peaks at 1,500 to 2,000 ppm.

The provincial pollution control branch has repeatedly called for a permit level B, which allows no more than 20 ppm of bivalent sulphur compounds every eight hours, to be applied to the plant.

The pollution control board recently granted Tahsis an additional two-years deferral on installation of major pollution abatement works.

The Dec. 31, 1978 deadline for the installation was changed to 1980 after the company pleaded financial difficulties. Tahsis estimates the cost of clean-up and control mechanisms in the millions of dollars.

The Union of British Columbia Indian Chiefs, which represents 45,000 native people in B.C. covered by federal treaties, passed a motion Thursday lending "its strongest support to the Nootka band in their struggle against the pulp mill."

Jim Brisebois, the Nootkas' advisor who acts for trade unions and Indians on environmental matters, said: "The Indian people just can't take any more. They were forced to move near the pulp mill to get jobs but all they got was pollution."

Workers in the mill, represented by Local 11 of the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada (PPWC), are angry at what they see as the rising incidence of gassing, a direct exposure to concentrated gas vapours.

Americans 'Mad as Hell' Canada Admitted Berster

MONTREAL (CP) — United States authorities have complained to the Canadian government about the ease with which a woman suspected of having links with the Baader-Meinhof terrorist gang in West Germany slipped past Canadian immigration officers at Mirabel airport here, according to the Gazette.

Quoting unidentified U.S. and Canadian officials, the newspaper says Kristina Berster, charged in Burlington, Vt., with violating U.S. passport laws, arrived in Montreal aboard an Air France flight from Paris on July 8.

On July 16, she was caught when she tripped a hidden alarm as she attempted to walk across the Canadian-American border near Noyan, Que.

American immigration officials said Berster used a fraudulent Iranian passport in the name of Shahrzad Nobori.

Quoting an unnamed Canadian official, the Gazette says American officials kept the arrest quiet to prevent any embarrassment to Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, who was visiting West Germany at the time.

"But the Americans were mad as hell," the paper quotes the official as saying.

"Ottawa is really fuming after getting hell from the Americans. The Americans want to know how Berster managed to pass a Canadian immigration check at Mirabel with a fraudulent Iranian passport that was so poorly forged."

The Gazette quotes an American official as saying that four pages were missing from the passport and that the seal over the photograph was not in the correct place.

The paper adds that because Berster was granted a visa in Paris, officials at Mirabel did not question her passport.

"They didn't question the passport because of the visa. The immigration officers figured autorities in Paris had checked everything out before granting the visa," the paper quotes a source as saying.

Berster is wanted in West Germany on 1973 charges of criminal conspiracy involving a series of terrorist bombings and the forgery of identity documents.

She is also charged with belonging to an illegal organization.

However, an official at the prosecutor's office in Karlsruhe, West Germany, said she is too minor a figure to bother with an extradition request.

Meanwhile Berster, jailed in lieu of $500,000 bond, is being treated as an ordinary prisoner at Albany County jail, says Sheriff John McNulty. He said she was not under any special security on the women's tier at jail, was getting regular meals and can enter recreation and education programs if she wishes.

MORE WATER FOR RAYONIER

The provincial water rights branch has granted Rayonier, one of B.C.'s major multi-national companies, a licence to increase its water intake from Blenkinsop Lake to irrigate its 43-acre tree farm operation on Blenkinsop Road.

The information was contained in a letter from water rights branch official P.G. Odynsky to the Saanich Greenbelt Association.

Odynsky said in his letter that he does not propose to order or ask Rayonier to install meters.

Under the terms of the licence, Rayonier has prior right to take water from the lake.

A few Blenkinsop growers also have licences to use water from the lake.

Greenbelt Association president Irene Block said the news scared her as the lake is being over-pumped.

"The Rayonier prior right means that other licence holders will have to take their chances with whatever water is left by the forest company," she said.

"We have a finite resource," she added. "If other licencees have to supplement their water supply with municipal water, then that's too bad."

She said she was convinced the branch had issued licences in excess of the volume of water in the lake.

Musical Fireworks Show Tonight

Butchart Gardens will stage it's spectacular musical fireworks show at 10.15 tonight.

It was not scheduled to be held this evening, but Gardens officials were able to arrange an additional showing.

Imported from France by Christopher Ross, son of Ian Ross, the owner of Butchart Gardens, the fireworks are synchronized with music.

The program lasts eight minutes and 41 seconds.

It's the first time this European style of fireworks has been seen in Victoria.

Courts Martial Set

Three armed forces servicemen will face a standing courts martial next Tuesday on drug related offences, a spokesman for the base in Esquimalt said on Friday.

The three were identified as M/Cpl. George B. Cruickshank, 33, of HMCS Kootenay, and privates Kimberly J. Atkinson, 18, and John E. Walker, 20, both attending the fleet school at the base.

Base information officer Capt. John MacDonald declined to reveal the nature of the charges

COUP TAKES BOLIVIA

LA PAZ (Reuter) — Gen. Juan Pereda Asbun was sworn in Friday night as president of Bolivia less than 24 hours after he led a military revolt against the government of President Hugo Banzer.

The swearing-in ceremony, little more than an hour after Gen. Banzer handed the leadership over to an ad-hoc military junta, ended a day of drama which saw a state of siege clamped on the country as tension rose here and in Santa Cruz, about 1,000 kilometres to the east.

Pereda, a military-backed candidate in presidential elections earlier this month, led the revolt in Santa Cruz to demand that the government abide by the result of the elections—which had given him an absolute majority in the presidential race.

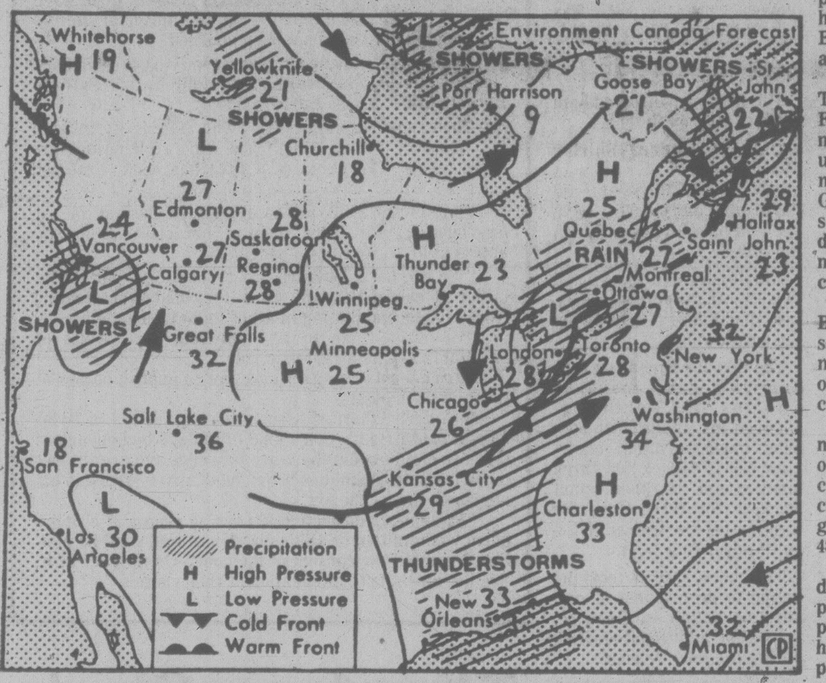
The elections, called to put Bolivia back on the road to democracy after 12 years of military rule, were annulled by the electoral courts Wednesday at the request of Pereda himself as well as the opposition. There had been widespread charges that fraud and intimidation were used to swing results in favor of the 46-year-old air force general.

There was speculation Pereda'a rebellion was the result of pressure from right-wing groups in the military who opposed a return to civilian rule. One broadcast said the rebels were trying to defend the country from "the danger of communism."

Pereda rejected the charges by his opponents and said the campaign against his victory at the polls was the work of left-wing extremists.

"This is not the first time we are faced with an extremist threat," Pereda said before taking the oath of office. "I am assuming this responsibility at a time when Bolivia must solve grave problems. This government is the result of the popular will, of the popular vote which nobody can question."

the weather



Map valid until noon Sunday

An onshore circulation is forecast to bring cooler temperatures to the south coastal district on Sunday, while showers will spread across the north coast and the northern half of the interior. The disturbance responsible for the shower activity is expected to weaken as it moves southward but should promote a cooling trend in the southern interior on Monday.

Greater Victoria: Sunday, mainly sunny but not as warm. Low tonight around 13. High Sunday 25 to 28.

Lower Mainland, East Vancouver Island: Sunday, mostly sunny but not quite so warm. Low tonight 11 to 14. Highs Sunday 23 to 26 along the coast and 27 to 31 inland.

North and West Vancouver Island: Sunday, sunny with morning cloudiness except mostly cloudy on the coast. Low tonight 7 to 11. Highs Sunday 16 to 28.

Band Acts on Fumes

They have asked the Workers' Compensation Board to investigate and appealed to the pollution control board for relief.

"There are potential long-term health problems from exposure to sulphur dioxide, even without the acute inhalations," said Dr. Courtland Mackenzie, chairman of the pollution control board and head of the University of B.C.'s department of health and epidemiology.

A preliminary study by Dr. Theodore Sterling of Simon Fraser University at Burnaby, B.C., requested by the union and released last month, showed 17 per cent of Gold River pulp mill workers suffered work-related lung damage, believed to be connected to exposure to sulphur compounds inside the mill.

Gold River physician Dr. Bryan Garson says he has seen as many as three or four men a week with symptoms of acute exposure to chlorine.

"Headache, sore throat, nausea, foul taste in the back of the mouth, pains in the chest—I advise the severe cases to stay away from a gassy environment for up to 48 hours." he said.

Peter Redfern, Tahsis resident manager, said the company was anxious to start pollution abatement but was handicapped by the falling price of kraft pulp, as well as an $18 million modernization program planned for its Tahsis B.C. sawmill.

Mackenzie said, "We had no alternative; the company couldn't install the equipment in the time alloted so we could have shut them down or given them more time. We gave them more time."

The union has said there were as many as 1,000 gassings in the past year—250 reported to first aid and 40 went to a doctor.

Redfern said the increased rate of reported gassings is "emotional as much as anything else."

"I don't feel there are deleterious effects on anyone as a result of emissions from this mill and if there's medical evidence to the contrary, let's see it.

"In fact, I'll go as far as to say there hasn't been a gassing this year—maybe three or four serious gassings requiring medical attention."

Johnson said: "We don't want to shut down the mill because we know workers are having their own health problems—our only hope is this bylaw because talks with the company just don't work."

Three natives are employed in the pulp mill and eight in the logging division.

Brisebois said: "If the mill management won't listen to workers and won't sacrifice revenue for the sake of a community's health, then the native people have shown that they will take matters into their own hands—they feel very strongly that their health and their children's future are at stake."

PACKER PACT SPURNED

TORONTO (CP) — Union bargainers at Swift Canadian Co. rejected a new contract proposal Friday and kept 2,000 employees out on strike across the country.

T. J. Dane, vice-president of operations for Swift, said the company offered a nine-per-cent wage increase over two years and improvements in pensions and fringe benefits.

The strike by members of the Canadian Food and Allied Workers union, in progress for five weeks, has closed Swift meat-packing plants in Toronto, Winnipeg, Edmonton, Lethbridge, Alta., and Vancouver.

Canada Packers Ltd. plants in those cities also are closed since the company locked out 4,000 employees, members of the same union, when the Swift workers went on strike.

The proposal included pay increases of 60 cents an hour in each year, plus one cent an hour for special adjustments in the first year and 34 cents in the second, he said.

The pre-strike offer was an increase of 41 cents an hour in the first year and 40 cents in the second.

The base rate for Swift employees is $6.44 an hour and the average is $6.86.

Improved pensions offered went from $10.50 a month for each year of service in the first offer to $11.50 a month for every year of service in the latest offer.

The current pension rate is $9.10 a month and the union is pushing for $13.50 to match the parent firm in the United States, a union spokesman has said.

House Was More Than a Home

VANCOUVER (CP) — Jan Kobylka has a message for the couple who rented his $500-a-month home and turned it into the city's most sophisticated after-hours nightclub in years.

If you want your damage deposit back, forget it.

Kobylka said he rented the newly-furnished home to an Alberta couple March 1. Two months later police closed the place following a midnight raid.

Kobylka said damage to the house, one-third of which he estimates was done by police, is close to $5,000 and he is having trouble collecting.

Sgt. Mike Beattie of the city vice-squad said the home was the most impressive after-hours club he had seen since he first joined the squad in 1965.

He said more than 20 vice, drug and uniformed officers, acting on a tip from informants, closed down the club in a raid that netted police a small amount of marijuana and liquor but no arrests.

Beattie said informants told police the fortress-like home operated Thursday through Saturday and was protected by men carrying baseball bats and shotguns.

He said members had to enter the club through a rear basement door reinforced with steel plating and thick wooden planks. A guard peering through a peep hole checked out customers before they entered.

Upstairs, there was a bar and dance floor, complete with stereo system, mirrors and colored lights. Liquor, marijuana and cocaine were sold across the counter, Beattie said.

He said pimps and prostitutes frequented the place and a set of house rules posted on the bathroom wall indicated how the place operated:

—Please park a block away when coming to the house;

—No bottles or drinks to be brought in or taken from the house;

—Keep the noise down coming and going;

—Do not spread the word about this place. It is your private spot and can only be this as long as you let us keep it this way;

—If stopped coming or going, and anyone should ask where you are coming from or going to, it is a birthday party, but do not give the address.

Beattie said only two men—both described as former motorcycle gang members with lengthy criminal records—were found inside when the house was raided.

Private School Aid Readied

The British Columbia government has set the percentages used to calculate grants to private schools under the Independent Schools Support Act.

Schools qualifying for the instructional support and operating costs grant will receive 30 per cent of their average operating cost per pupil multiplied by the number of qualifying students in the school, the government disclosed Friday in an order-in-council.

Schools qualifying only for the operating costs grant will receive nine per cent of their average operating costs per pupil multiplied by the number of qualifying students.

About 100 schools have qualified for government assistance. The government set aside $9 million for grants in this year's budget.

First Settlements In Cranbrook Crash

CALGARY (CP) — A lawyer for the insurance company of Pacific Western Airlines, whose Boeing 737 crashed in February at Cranbrook killing 43 persons, says the first out-of-court settlements for victims have been reached.

But Eric Lane said in an interview Friday that some lawyers are still considering taking their cases to California, where settlements have traditionally been high.

He said some lawyers are investigating Rohr Corp., which made the 737's thrust reversers, and Boeing Aircraft in California, where Rohr is located, instead of negotiating with the insurance pool which Lane has organized.

The pool, formed to make settlements as quickly as possible, is composed of Pacific Western, the federal transport ministry, the City of Cranbrook, Boeing Aircraft and the Rohn Corp.

Lane said four or five settlements have been completed. He would not reveal names of the persons nor the amounts involved, but said one settlement was with a survivor and the others with estates of victims.

Lane also said the pool is making payments to victims who find themselves in financial difficulty pending settlements or suits.

"Whoever is eventually found responsible for the crash, we all know the people on the plane had nothing to do with it."

Lane said that after the pool settles with all the victims, its members will fight the issue of liability among themselves.

The pool plans to contest the California courts' jurisdiction in the crash if some of the estate lawyers follow through with plans to sue there, he said.

Cars vs Buses

In introducing his new transit legislation, Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis undoubtedly hoped to rationalize transit services and establish a system under which buses, and perhaps later rapid transit, would be operated to provide the greatest amount of service at the most reasonable cost.

Unfortunately, because of the changes he devised in the organization of transit, his hopes may backfire badly — perhaps to the point of destroying even what transit services now exist.

The thrust of the new legislation has been to force municipal governments to assume some of the financial and administrative obligations of running transit services, not in itself an unreasonable object. But the apparently monstrous size of the obligations being imposed and the suddenness with which they have descended are making municipal governments immensely unwilling to take them on.

Although the provincial government has promised that municipalities will not be forced to raise property taxes to pay for transit, at least not next year, the other types of taxes they will impose are no more palatable either to council members or to the public at large — possible increases of up to three cents a gallon on the gasoline tax, surcharges on B.C. Hydro bills (and, aside from the fact that buses have been run by Hydro through an historical accident, what relationship is there between electricity use and buses anyway?).

Although full details of the plan have not yet been made public, some municipal councils are already spelling out their position — a position which is coming close in some cases to saying, "The heck with transit anyway if it's going to mean so many new taxes and other headaches! Let's just provide more facilities for cars and drivers!"

Delta Mayor Tom Goode has begun to argue strongly against rapid transit for the Lower Mainland; instead, he says, construction should begin of a new highway crossing of the Fraser River. One Burnaby alderman, Bill Lewarne, has gone even further, suggesting that the people should be asked, presumably through some sort of referendum, whether they want to pay out money for any transit system at all.

"We're an auto-oriented society and that's not going to change," Lewarne told a recent meeting of Burnaby council.

Although no Greater Victoria politicians have yet spoken publicly with such force, it's obvious they too are concerned about imposing new taxes with no matching new services readily apparent to the public.

But, under the new legislation, the only alternative the municipal governments will have to imposing the taxes will be to cut the services, probably to replace them with more highways, parking lots and service stations.

A decision to go in that direction is equivalent to a decision to turn B.C. cities, eventually, into replicas of Los Angeles where the smog from cars (as well as industry) has been so severe in recent weeks that doctors have been warning people to stay indoors. It is a decision to commit ourselves to a sprawling series of grey concrete ramps and freeways desecrating farmland, ruining the landscape, cutting through residential neighborhoods.

And most important, it is a decision to spend our tax dollars on those ramps and freeways, their construction, maintenance and regulation rather than on transit services. It is not necessarily that transit services are more expensive than the total costs of road construction and maintenance, but the tax subsidies to them are indirect and much harder to ferret out.

There is no reason to believe that those sorts of decisions are the kind Curtis was looking for when he brought in the new law. But now that it is becoming obvious they are the kind of decisions that may well be made, he should review the legislation before it is proclaimed to ensure that it will not create problems far more severe than the one it was designed to solve.

Undermining Democracy

Lieutenant-Governor Henry Bell-Irving should not be offering apologies for his rôle in talking with a group which tried to convince him to refuse royal assent to the Heroin Treatment Act.

He said it probably would have been wiser if he had not spent half an hour talking to members of a committee which questions the legislation's constitutionality. Though he has already granted royal assent, they wanted him to withhold his signature from a cabinet order which will proclaim the act — a neccessary step before the law takes effect.

Bell-Irving met them because "they were very persistent and I supose I met them because I am a strong believer in freedom of speech and fair comment, perhaps too strong a believer. It would probably have been very wise if I didn't meet with them at all."

Perhaps, but the ad hoc group which badgered Bell-Irving for the meeting deserves the real scolding. They should be charged with abusing the democratic process.

There are numerous methods of registering one's opinion with the authorities in our parliamentary system; the people we elect to govern are not deaf. Health Minister Bob McClelland made a number of changes in the heroin bill after several delegations made their objections to him. Public protests can be organized, the media are responsive to people with complaints, public opinion can be marshalled.

If after all of these have been tried, an individual or organization still has serious objections to a piece of legislation, the courts are open to all.

But attempting to persuade the lieutenant-governor — who is strictly a ceremonial figure with only the barest of vestigial powers — to lend his office to a perversion of the parliamentary system is but a few steps removed from treason.

Vancouver lawyer Paul Meyers and his group have stepped over a fine line and dragged the lieutenant-governor into party politics. They, not Henry Bell-Irving, should be embarrassed and ashamed.

Summit Talk, Inside Variety

BONN — A worm's eye view of the summit:

At gatherings like the just-ended meeting of the seven western leaders, the press peform as both judge and jury. The media both report what the leaders say, and pronounce whether the exercise was a success or failure.

The best example of press power was the performance of Barbara Walters, ABC television's million dollar baby. Her entourage of 14, including four script assistants, two producers, a coiffeuse and a makeup girl, was as large as the delegation of officials who flew over with Prime Minister Trudeau.

What Walters wants, she gets. On the opening day, she persuaded U.S. President Jimmy Carter to give her an exclusive sidewalk interview, in defiance of the collective decision of the seven that none would speak to the press until the conference ended. In fact, about all that Carter told Walters was that things were going well.

In a Submarine

British Prime Minister Jim Callaghan, who also broke the rules but only in an off-the-record briefing to the entire UK press contingent, in fact provided more interesting material than did Carter. Callaghan disclosed that the seven spent most of their first lunch reminiscing about elections. Callaghan's own contribution to this chat, apparently, was to recount that he spent his first campaign as a candidate in 1945, in a submarine at sea. How the Germans and Japanese responded to this anecdote, Callaghan did not say.

Including make-up girl and coiffeuses, 2,800 press types were accredited. Among this international agglommeration, the Canadians and Americans seemed to talk together the most easily: Carter's press aide Jody Powell and a clutch of White House reporters, for example, wound up one evening in the same hotel bar used by the Canadians. At the other end of the getting-to-know-you scale, the Japanese journalists, by cultural accident, tended to keep to themselves, as did, by design, the French contingent.

Trudeau's aides were at their inventive best in trying to explain away the obscene gesture the Prime Minister made to photographers by cocking his right arm upwards at the elbow. Trudeau hadn't meant to signal, "up yours," explained his staff, but only "bye, bye."

None of the press veterans of "fuddle duddle" believed a word of this; in fact, Canadian reporters thereafter took to greeting each other in hotel halls with the signal of a cocked right hand and with the salutation "je suis Canadien."

Trudeau, though, was innocent of another charge levied against him.

The British popular press, which always gets everything wrong, reported that Trudeau arrived at Bonn-Cologne airport wearing "moccasins;" in fact, he was wearing loafers.

BARBARA WALTERS
. . . brought 14 with her

Among the seven leaders, report insiders, the least popular is French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing. He insists, as Carter does not, though he bears the same dual titles, on being treated as both head of government and head of state. Giscard thus is always the last to arrive at meetings and at the group's formal meals. He also demanded that the final communique refer not to "leaders" but to the more longwinded, though correct, "heads of government or heads of state."

One of the best-respected members of the group was Japanese Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda. At 73, he's the oldest, and he has a magnificent face, full of sad, patient widsom. At the gatherings, says a source, "Fukuda always gave the impression of trying harder than anyone else to say the right thing in the right way, but of making no effort to make an effect."

The leaders who spoke the most often during the two days were, in roughly descending order: Helmut Schmidt of West Germany, Carter ("He amazes the Europeans by being so softspoken and polite," recounts one participant), Trudeau (he suggested the solutions to three tricky problems of wording in the final communique), Fukuda, Callaghan, Giscard d'Estaing, and last, and easily the least, Giulio Andreotti of Italy.

If Trudeau managed to convince his fellow leaders he could bootstrap the Canadian economy to a growth rate of "up to five per cent" this year, he failed miserably to convince the editor of the Berlin Bild newspaper. Above a story about Canada's economic prospects in the fact of high unemployment and high inflation, Bild stuck the headline: Canada Needs A Miracle.

Grim and Obscene

The day after the summit conference, a dozen Canadian journalists flew with external affairs minister Don Jamieson on a quick visit to Berlin, both to get a taste of that vivid, ungermanic city, where, typically, the same building houses the "Jesus Centre" and the "Eros Cine Centre" and the platform to view the Wall.

The Wall is all that you expect it to be, and more. It is grim and intimidating — "an obscenity," Jamieson called it.

As well, the Wall is impersonal and bureaucratic. The east Germans whitewash it regularly on the western side, by means of a cherry-picker that lowers a painter down from their own side of the three-metre-high stockade. The top of the Wall is not jagged, as you would suppose, but rounded. Apparently, the east Germans settled on the bulbous-top design, which leaves a man with nothing to grab hold of, after testing it against their best athletes.

For so bureaucratic an edifice, the Wall as we call it, is a quite inadequate name. The east Germans' title is far better. They call the Wall the "anti-fascist rampart along the border of peace of the socialist camp."

Report Card Time, Part II
Saanich Council Gets a B

The report cards grading some of our elected officials continue this week with a look at Saanich council.

As was explained last week, these report cards are based on a purely subjective evaluation of the performance of the elected officials during the past six months. Factors taken into account include performance in the political arena, performance on committees and in work with individual departments, responsiveness to concerns of the community (using that term in its widest sense), and overall contribution to civic government.

Council members are ranked roughly in order of merit, from top to bottom, and the grades given correspond approximately to those awarded in school: A = excellent; B = good; C = mediocre; and D = unsatisfactory.

Here then are the ratings for Saanich council:

ALD. HOWARD STURROCK - A - It is rare when a rookie alderman receives an A rating, but it would be hard to underestimate Sturrock's positive influence on council. His previous experience in the provincial government has given him the technical, administrative and political knowledge to move smoothly into the municipal forum. He came to council with a strong community base, but has shown the skeptics that persons from those community groups can be rational and constructive contributors to civic government, not just protestors and opposers.

MAYOR MEL COUVELIER - B - Couvelier has wrought miracles in transforming council from a floundering, non-productive group obsessed with ideological differences to a reasonably steady and constructive team, not always in agreement but willing to try to work together. His handling of meetings is excellent. However, he misses an A rating because of occasional outbreaks of that old politicians' illness — foot-in-mouth disease, the most renowned of which was his comments about women's dress styles and rape.

ALD. JOHN MIKA — B — Mika is an easy winner of the award for the council member who has improved most in the past year, perhaps not just for Saanich but for all of Greater Victoria. He has developed a sense of perspective, has learned to save his energy and his best shots for the times they really matter. He has also developed some ability to work with the other council members instead of fighting a one-man battle from the sidelines. He could improve his performance still further by approaching issues with a slightly more open mind, rather than coming to most debates with a position already fixed.

ALD. ROBERT CAMERON - B - Cameron is a solid, reliable alderman who goes about his business quietly and thoroughly. The proposals he brings to council usually show signs of solid research and careful planning; in this regard he should get special credit for his ideas on limiting election expenses. However, he has never developed the assertiveness necessary to function really well in the political arena; it is not surprising he is already saying he does not plan to seek re-election.

ALD. DAVID PATERSON - B - Paterson is bright and hard-working and brings to council a financial and administrative expertise that is extremely useful. Even in the days when council was a dogfight, he emphasized rational debate dealing with issues, not with personalities. But he tends to be impatient and undiplomatic with those who cannot keep up with his quickness and, worse, with those who disagree with him. Like Mika, he approaches many issues with a position too firmly fixed (the opposite position to Mika's in nearly every case).

ALD. IAN CASS - C - In many ways Cass is deserving of a higher grade than this: he is one of the most creative spirits on council and consistently raises interesting issues to which no one else is yet paying attention (pedestrian safety and public transit are two recent examples). His performance in public, however, is uninspiring: he frequently appears as a congenital waffler and his speeches are often so long-winded and pedantic that it's almost impossible to understand them, even when they do deal with interesting topics.

ALD. MARY CASILIO - C - Casilio is undoubtedly one of the hardest-working members of the council and takes extremely seriously her job as ombudsman for Saanich residents. She has surely gained many friends throughout the municipality with her detailed concern for their individual problems. Yet, despite several years on council, she does not seem to have developed the expertise necessary to deal with the major issues facing Saanich and her understanding of some of the most serious controversies seems shallow. In a municipality confronting as many fundamental decisions as is Saanich, this must be seen as a serious failing.

ALD. FRED SEVERSON - C - Last year, as chairman of the lands and planning committee, Severson found himself sucked into the vortex of hostility and controversy that dominated the council. Although he does not have that difficult chairmanship this year, he does not seem to have recovered from the problems it caused him. He does not appear to have regained any sense of perspective nor to have accepted the changes caused on council by last November's elections. This is unfortunate because when dealing with topics that he knows well, such as parks and recreation, he is a constructive and useful council member.

ALD. GEOFF VANTREIGHT - D - It seems a little unfair to rate a rookie alderman as unsatisfactory but so far Vantreight has given little indication that he understands what he got into when he was elected. Indeed, he doesn't seem to realize that last fall's election campaign is over and that it is time to accept the voters' decisions and get on with the business at hand. Most of his public statements deal with past elections or future elections, neither of which helps in the slightest in dealing with present problems.

Grade for council as a whole - B - Saanich now is a reasonably stable, sensible council looking carefully for ways to meet the conflicting demands being placed on it. The job is obviously a difficult one, but there is reason for optimism that suitable solutions will be found. However, council is still suffering some hangover from the atrocious year it had in 1977 — an ingrained anxiety about participation by special interest groups and even ordinary citizens, and distrust and suspicion between some council members.

Next week: the Greater Victoria school board. — B.McL.

Tax Refunds?

The Times recently reported that North Vancouver municipal council has unanimously voted to limit property tax increases to 10 per cent over the amount paid by taxpayers last year. Anyone whose taxes went up by more than 10 per cent will receive a refund of the difference upon application.

As a Saanich taxpayer whose taxes went up 33 per cent, I wonder when my munificent municipality is going to do something along the same lines. Or shouldn't I hold my breath? — M.L. Chazottes, 2884 Phyllis Street.

Bringing in the Beer

What puzzles me is, if hundreds of cases of beer are available in the San Juan Islands and are imported illegally into Canada (Times, July 18) why isn't the B.C. Liquor Administration Branch buying up these cases and bringing them in legally?

In the present strike-lockout situation, and given the presumed need to satisfy the tourists (not to mention the thirsty natives), one would think the B.C. Liquor Branch would have bought up every spare bottle and can of beer in the western U.S.A.

No comment is necessary on the actions of the upright citizen of Island View Beach who kept watch on these smugglers and arranged for their apprehension. — A.G. LeBlond, 397 Island Highway.

Evil Is Evil

Your editorial Dissidents and Detente of July 18 is frightening.

Must we only allow ourselves to censure and take action against the loss of individual freedom in countries which pose no threat to us? Surely evil is evil wherever it occurs.

The history of Munich teaches us that an oppressive and brutal regime is not appeased or deterred by gentle chidings and slightly averted eyes.

On the contrary, realistic Russia has always stepped back a bit when faced with too strong a reaction from the west.

Peace in our time at the cost of even one victim is meaningless. — K. Chatterton, Victoria.

Writers Wanted

I am well aware that your newspaper is generally not used for a lonely hearts club, nor do I have any intention of becoming the first member. However, because of my present circumstances, I am reduced to asking for assistance via your publication.

I am a 23-year-old man presently incarcerated in a Nevada prison for a minor offence. Being an orphan and also recently divorced, I do not have family or friends to correspond with.

Basically, bluntly, I am looking for intelligent, sincere individuals who can: reaquaint me with the area of my future home, alert me to future employment possibilities for my release, give me further instruction in the French language through correspondence and generally just exchange letters so as to give me an occasional 15-cent taste of freedom. I must underline, however, that I am not looking for people sympathetic to my plight, but looking for open-minded people empathetic with life, who would enjoy a postal symbiosis. — Jim Sams, No. 13375, P.O. Box 97, Stewart, Nevada 89437.

Language of Law

It might be interesting to Mr. Anderson, who wrote you on July 15 (No Language Law) that England did pass a law in the 13th century making English the law of the land. — David R. Beddow, 1152 Hutchinson Road, Cobble Hill.

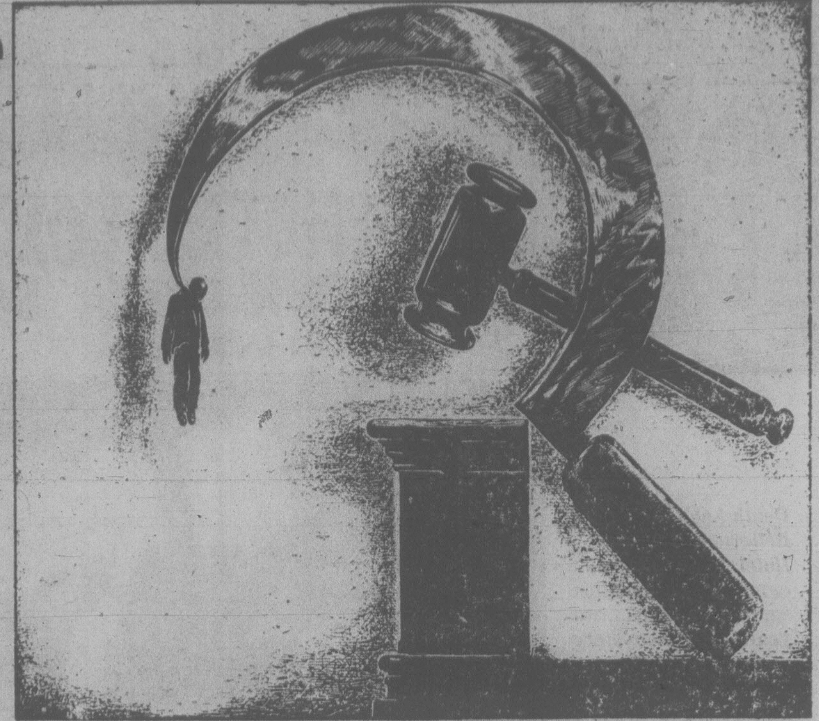
Trials Split Rebels from People



By DAVID SHIPLER

But they don't signal Return to Stalinism

MOSCOW — As the Soviet Union turned a deaf ear last week to cries of outrage in the West, and handed down heavy sentences against two prominent dissidents, an unresolved question hung over Moscow. It was the question of the future, the uncertainty of what these trials, and especially the treason conviction of Anatoly B. Shcharansky, would mean for the quality of political life in the Soviet Union.

Some saw in them a strong strain of neo-Stalinism. Others regarded the government's actions as ugly, but nonetheless rather limited and somewhat surgical efforts to isolate and silence a small band of vocal protesters without returning to the pervasive terror of the Stalinist years. Outside the courthouse where Shcharansky was sentenced, an elderly man who had spent time in Stalin's prisons remarked, "I remember what it was like under Stalin. It's not the same."

Still, the Shcharansky case was the first time since Stalin that a treason charge had been used for such a blatant political purpose, with such anti-Semitic overtones and against such a prominent figure. More typical of political trials since Stalin's death was one in Kaluga, south of Moscow, where veteran dissident Aleksandr Ginzburg was convicted last week of "anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda."

The Shcharansky case had more variables and more significance for reading the attitudes and priorities of the Soviet power structure at this juncture. Both in the harm the authorities did and the harm they chose not to do, a picture emerged of a sharply focused attack, although the potential was there for a broader assault against Jews in general and against the United States.

The treason charge itself tapped an ancient current of virulent patriotism, and a distaste for those who speak out against the motherland. Many Russians see the dissident issue just in those stark terms, a "love it or leave it" mentality that leads them to express shock even when Americans openly criticize the United States. In that sense, the accusations against Shcharansky were a clever mixture of falsehoods and half-truths that played to this broader sense of values among the Soviet populace.

How isolated the dissidents are from the common sweep of Soviet society, or at least how little they represent ordinary complaints and attitudes, is a constant point of debate in Moscow among Russians and foreigners alike.

First, most of the dissidents are highly educated professionals. In a class-conscious, often elitist society, they stand apart from the workers and peasants, rarely seeming to understand or to sympathize with the simpler, less erudite concerns that govern those everyday lives. So, for example, when a small group of workers tried to organize a free trade union several months ago to protest corruption, dangerous job conditions, unjust dismissals and the like, they got little support from the more established rights activists, and they quickly vanished into prisons and psychiatric hospitals.

Secondly, the dissidents are daring. It is not unusual to encounter "closet dissidents," Russians who say in private all that the open dissidents say in public. The days are gone, at least for the time being, when a private bit of irreverence could land someone in prison, and political jokes are so popular that it is hard to pass an evening around a Russian table without hearing a couple of good ones.

But public utterances are still dangerous, as last week's trials show, and few people are willing to take the risk. Occasionally those who are quiet are eager to make a small gesture of support, however, and this may reflect a wider, silent sympathy that is impossible to measure. Veniamin Levich, a prominent physical chemist who has been refused a visa to Israel, tells of being attacked viciously in the Soviet press last year, and, the next day, finding a saleswoman from a local food shop at his apartment door. She knew he liked a certain hard-to-get salted fish, she said, and she and her co-workers, indignant about the attack, wanted to bring some of his favorite fish to cheer him up.

But the government efforts to drive wedges between the dissidents and the larger society are unceasing, as was evident in the Shcharansky case. Since Shcharansky is a Jew, and since the indictment dealt in large measure with his role in the movement of Jewish activists and his support from Jewish groups abroad, it tended to reinforce the anti-Semitism prevalent in Soviet society, the tendency to see Jews as foreign, un-Russian, un-Soviet, alien, suspect.

With the case also centering on Shcharansky's contacts with American correspondents, the old wariness of contact with foreigners — maintained at a simmer in the last decade — has been turned up to a slightly higher heat. Russians attuned to nuances in party policy will feel it wise to be a bit more careful now, and this may strain some of the personal and professional contacts between Americans and Russians in scientific, educational and cultural endeavor.

The dissidents, and particularly the Jewish activists, were sent a message: if they are refused exit visas, they should sit quietly and continue to work. Then nothing will happen to them. If they make public criticisms of Soviet policy, if they support American pressure on Moscow over emigration, if they give statements to foreign corresponents, they face a death sentence for treason.

What the authorities chose to avoid in the Shcharansky trial was the spectaular show of anti-Semitism and anti-Americanism that was possible. The official communiques as the trial progressed mentioned "foreign intelligence services," but not the Central Intelligence Agency. The accounts to foreign correspondents by Leonid Shcharansky, the defendant's brother, revealed a few anti-Semitic references, but not the sweeping smears that had been expected. Furthermore, the courtroom testimony, as reported, stopped short of all-out attacks on the American Embassy and on American diplomats. It stuck pretty much to the line taken previously in the Soviet press: no diplomats currently in Moscow were mentioned, and only former Moscow correspondents were named.

The trial may be a precursor of harder times for the dwindling group of outspoken dissidents, and it may very well reflect a growth in the power and maneuverability of the dreaded police apparatus. But it may also have the effect of driving more people into dissent, or at least into quiet, grinding discontent, as previous harsh sentences of dissidents have done.

On balance, though, it does not appear to portend much change for average Russians who do not engage in political debate with the authorities, who live simply and never bump up against the limits of permissible behavior. They tend to see the dissidents as from a great distance, people whose fate is not bound up with theirs, but who have crossed a line they never think to cross. That sense of isolation has probably increased after last week.

New York Psychics Ready to Tell What You Want to Hear

By LINDA BLANDFORD
Manchester Guardian

NEW YORK — Acquaintances in New York will tell you the name of their psychiatrist, good acquaintances the number of their cleaning woman, friends the address of their private leg waxer but good friends the whereabouts of their psychic.

It is only a guess but there are possibly more fortune-tellers in New York these days than corner grocery stores. Maybe they've always been here but it's only now that they've been adopted by those whose rational lives suggest they would know better. And as the calibre of the clients has gone up so have the prices and the flamboyance of the marketing methods — fancy window displays, eye-catching signs, bargain packages.

Our local purveyor of ESP guidance has been offering a month-long special sale: tarot and ouji, two for the price of one. If I introduced a friend, she said, she'd throw in some free head readings as well. Since her hands reeked too liberally of jasmine concentrate (a popular West Side smell), the idea of her groping my cranium was less than appealing.

All of this goes way beyond the notion of horoscopes, sun signs and similar sciences. This is plain, old-fashioned fortune telling. On the screen we have a crowd of possessed children (Carrie, Omen, Omen II, Exorcist, Exorcist II, etc.). On the backstreets, the spirits can be yours for only $10.

"For $15 I'll hear my voices," this from a young divorcee on Amsterdam Avenue who discovered her powers the day she knew her husband was having it off with another. She opened her psychic surgery because it gave her something to do that didn't need a baby-sitter and it was wonderful for the tax deductions. The mere thought of two toddlers crawling around under the home-dyed batik tablecloth (one of her earlier discoveries) while their mother's voices were penetrating my inner being was enough to destroy that atmosphere.

But most psychics have thrown in general practice and specialized instead. Some of the older ones still offer the same "I see a tall, dark handsome stranger" routine but the new generation obviously predicted in time that all kinds of sexual combinations were coming in to complicate matters. "I see a small, gay poetess who will liberate you from your search for vaginal orgasms," doesn't have the same reassuring ring.

Trendier psychics have gone in for professional counselling. There are those who specialize in the stock market, those who can foresee corporate intrigues right up to vice-president level, those who can interpret the inner longings of Washington politicos who fly in for urgent readings. It's a source of some concern to me that for all we know America's African policy is being influenced by New York ouji boards. It would not surprise me in the least; nothing would surprise New Yorkers about how Washington works.

But the really foxy psychics are into neighborhood identification. They tailor their readings to suit the residents. Thus you can hear anything you want if you can work out where you would live if you were what you wanted to hear.

Now everyone knows that all plumbing, anxious-looking West Side women are nursing a first novel. You have to believe that this was my palm reading ($5) from our local West Side psychic. There was no name on her shop window and when asked she said it was of no importance for she was only a medium.

"I'm glad we've discovered each other for I know we are meant to have this and many more meetings. I sense that you are carrying something around inside you — a book, that's it. Your hands tell me that you're very, very creative and you will write but you must be trusting and remember that you are living your story every day of your life." And so on for two minutes.

That afternoon, I went to another psychic on the East Side tucked between a sex aids shop and the organic health food parlor. Madame Josie looked less like gypsy Josie than the Madame: backcombed hair and a white fluffy carpet to match.

"You're tense," she announced, examining my bitten nails. Then she opened my palms, for $7. "Of course, you're tense, honey, you're ambitious aren't you? I see trouble. Not doing as well as you'd like, perhaps? Now listen to me, honey, you're going to the top, you hear, the top." And so on for two minutes. Madame even went so far as to say that since I would undoubtedly have all the money I wanted sooner or later, she'd offer me a flat rate: $20 for three readings.

Not to be discouraged, it seemed worth trying SoHo, the artist's colony. There I found a medium in deeply slashed white sequin ball gown and fox fur claiming the even more unlikely name of Mrs. Sylvia.

We spent some time in an unsavoury haggling over price. Mrs. Sylvia felt that it was hardly worth her concentration unless I'd take her $10 special — tarot cards, both palms and mind. She would have preferred to offer "full life by the Pyramid" ($25) as she could tell from my eyes that I was both intelligent and complex. Palms had done just fine so far, I said, and the $5 reading it was — cash in advance. Mrs. Sylvia had obviously been fobbed off with half daubed canvases.

Madame Josie came recommended by one of her former clients, a journalist friend of mine. For three years Madame had been assuring her of this plum job that was just around the corner. One day she went back and Madame read the routine again. "But I don't want that any more," said my friend, "I've quit my job and I'm going off to the country to write a novel." Madame paused. "Then, my dear, you're wasting my time." Now you wouldn't hear that from any West Side psychic.

The 'Night Shift' On Enchanted Isle

The sun was painting a spectacular end to the day. It had just dropped below the horizon, bathing in its eerie pink afterglow the Pacific, Cleland Island, the hundreds of gulls that hovered over the island, the dozens of puffins and guillemots that hurtled to and fro around the island, and a motley group of mortals huddled on the shore.

Except for the people, everything seemed as it should be with Cleland, as it may have been for hundreds of years, and, hopefully, as it will be for hundreds more. This great biological factory, off the west coast of Vancouver Island, was in full production with a day shift and a night shift going all out. It was the night shift that had attracted the people to Cleland. They were an intrusion into Cleland's productivity, but in this case a relatively benign — and brief — intrusion.

I was one of that group. We were on Cleland — a 50-acre rock that arises from the Pacific west of Tofino — thanks to the efforts of Mike Shepard and George Sirk of Swiftsure Tours, and to the good offices of Bristol Foster, who co-ordinates British Columbia's ecological reserve program. Mike and George got us there; Bristol gave his consent that we could be there. Cleland, as an important seabird colony, is one of British Columbia's ecological reserves.

The pink of sunset had begun to fade into the half light of dusk when the curtain rose on the opening scene of an incredible performance which — with variations — was not to end until the first light of morning.

It began with four birds — Rhinocerous Auklets — bursting, like low-level bombers, from the cow parsnip and salmonberry and rocketing, just over our heads, out to sea. They were followed almost immediately by two more — one with several fish in its beak.

We had a moment to consider the impact of that opening scene, but only a moment, before the next started. It began much as the first, with four Rhinos, quickly followed by three more — then six, nine, two — then another brief respite.

This gave us time to see, by peering over the grass-rimmed edge of the beach, the Rhinos coming in over the southeast side of the island, hurtling low over the vegetation and flaring out over our hiding place and back to sea again.

By following their flight we found that they made a wide circle, only to sweep back over us again as they sought their nesting-burrows in the shallow soil behind the beach where we huddled.

Just as we were digesting the significance of this little discovery, the air to the south became filled with birds. Groups, now numbering fifty to a hundred birds in each, quickly followed one another over the island and over us. They began coming far too fast to count. Close-packed, and seemingly sometimes out of control, they stormed low over the island, a few dropping out with each pass to find their burrows under the dense vegetation.

Once two collided in mid-air, right over us, and fell, stunned, to the beach, where the yellowish horns on their beaks that give them their name Rhinoceros Auklet, and their white whiskers, could be easily seen. The two casualties stayed with us for some time but they soon recovered, apparently none the worse for the experience.

Another time one dropped into the vegetation behind a big beach log, only to reappear in a moment on top of the log, where it suddenly came face to face with a dozen pairs of human eyes peering intently at it. To say the bird bore a surprised expression would be understating the situation.

For more than an hour the black blizzard of Rhinos continued. Seldom was the sky completely empty. But by the time it was almost dark the flood had begun to abate as more and more of the birds found their burrows.

Only then were we able to ponder the peculiar life-style of the Rhinos, a life-style which, at this time of year, keeps one of the pair feeding at sea all day and the other in a dark burrow incubating an egg. And which brings them, apparently unerringly, and among hundreds of other seemingly similar burrows, together again at dusk.

It was an unforgettable sight, the homecoming of the Rhinos, and I feel privileged to be among the few who have seen it.

Death knell for famed Bellevue-Stratford Hotel in Philadelphia came with liquidation sale this week...two years after a mystery malady struck an American Legion conference at the hotel killing almost 30 people and leaving 156 others sickened. Illness was also fatal to the hotel, causing bookings to fall off and finally forcing receivership. Following a $20 million renovation, however, the hotel is slated to re-open doors next year but under a new name.

Woman Facing Trial

MOSCOW (AP) — The wife of prominent Jewish activist Vladimir Slepak said Friday she will go on trial next Wednesday for "malicious hooliganism," the same charge which sent her husband into exile for five years.

The charges against Maria Slepak and her husband were filed after the couple displayed a protest banner from the balcony of their apartment which overlooks central Moscow's Gorky Street.

The banner denounced the repeated refusal by Soviet authorities to let the Slepaks emigrate to Israel.

Mrs. Slepak told reporters from the West she was informed of the trial date Friday.

Dissident's Letters Kept From His Wife

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The wife of Soviet Jewish dissident Anatoly Shcharansky says she hasn't heard from her husband since he was jailed, although she learned he writes daily.

"I was told by someone I know in London who had seen him that Anatoly has written a letter to me every day," Avital Shcharansky said Friday. "The KGB promised to get the letters to me, but I have not received any yet."

Mrs. Shcharansky made the remark at a noontime rally held in front of the Soviet consulate to protest "KGB persecution of Jews."

"It helps give the American government a mandate to take concrete steps in behalf of human rights," she said. "We have to teach the Russians that economic relations will suffer."

The rally was sponsored by the Bay Area Council for Soviet Jewry and Scientists for Shcharansky, recently imprisoned in the Sovet Union for his dissident activities

Mrs. Shcharansky has been living in Israel since 1974 and is visiting the United States to enlist support for her husband.

"We must continue with our demonstrations and other efforts until he is freed," she told the crowd.

Vermont Victim Succumbs

MONTPELIER (AP) — A man has died from Legionnaires' Disease — the mysterious illness which last year caused the deaths of 17 persons in Vermont.

Dorothy Griffith, a health department spokesman, said the person who died was one of two recently-confirmed cases of the pneumonia-like illness.

A total of seven cases have been confirmed this year.

While the cases still are considered "sporadic," officials said, the appearance of new cases is similar to last year's outbreak.

CAREERS

Secret Namibia Accord Ready?

LONDON (AP) — Canada and four Western countries trying to seek independence for South-West Africa, also known as Namibia, from white-ruled South Africa have agreed secretly to support demands by black nationalists for disputed Walvis Bay.

Diplomats disclosed Friday that the five had made the informal pledge to South-West African People's Organization.

SWAPO is recognized by the United Nations as the only legitimate representative of the people of South-West Africa, which is moving toward full independence by the end of this year.

South Africa has managed the former German colony under a post-First World War mandate that was repudiated by the UN.

It has agreed to the five-country call for UN-supervised elections that would give the territory black-majority rule, but it has insisted on keeping Walvis Bay and its seaport that are surrounded by South-West Africa.

The South Africans maintain that Walvis Bay was ceded to them by Britain in the late 19th century and never was part of the mandated territory.

Publicly, the five Western countries have said the future of Walvis Bay might be negotiated after South-West Africa is independent. The diplomats said SWAPO leader Sam Nujoma wanted a more precise commitment and was given the informal promise.

Keeping the Festivals Straight In Your Mind

Some confusion seems to have occurred in the minds of people, all the way from Recreation-Conservation offices of the government to would-be ticket buyers, between the Victoria Summer Festival and Victoria International Festival.

The former is the title of the Victoria Symphony Society's free, mostly outdoor concerts; the latter belongs to the series of 28 concerts at McPherson Playhouse and St.Michael's University School which features a number of world-renowned artists and small ensembles.

Concerts in this series for the coming week include the first Piano Opulence program at St.Michael's tonight in which keyboard works by the great keyboard composers will be featured; Sunday's concert at the McPherson, which is an all-Schubert program with Canadian mezzo soprano Phyllis Mailing and pianist William Aide performing some of the lieder, the Philadelphia String Quartet, and Sydney Humphreys with Robin Wood playing the Duo Op.163.

Lillooet Indians Win Island Support

A resolution supporting a Lillooet District Tribal council request for permission to increase the native Indian take of fish from the Fraser River has been endorsed at a meeting of the South Vancouver Island Tribal Association.

Chief Tom Sampson of the Tsarlip band, said if the take of salmon is increased it will ease the tension that now exists between Lillooet Indians and non-Indians.

Indians are permitted to net part of salmon runs in rivers for use as food, but many band complain quotas are too small.

The resolution will be sent to the International Pacific Salmon Commission.

Sampson said the council also met with federal fisheries officer to discuss Indian fishing rights.

"The council and federal fisheries agreed that the most important problem facing the salmon fisheries is conservation," he said. "We both agree this should be given top priority."

"We also endorsed the federal fisheries policy that fish as food for the native people is next in priority."

He denied a charge by the B.C. Wildife Federation that Indians are opposed to monitoring salmon netted in the rivers and creeks of the province.

Boat Race Ends in Tragedy

GRANDE CACHE, Alta. (CP) — A young Mexican's dream of winning the first world championship river boat race ended in tragedy Friday in the glacier-fed waters of Smoky River in western Alberta.

Martin Beruete Solis, 23, of Mexico City died instantly when his jet boat hit a canyon wall at about 128 kilometres an hour.

The mechanic's craft, Miss Jetka No. 323, was taking part in an eight-kilometre qualification run for the race which starts today.

Two other members of the crew, also from Mexico City, were injured and sent to hospital in Edmonton, about 350 kilometres to the east.

Guillermo Dominguez Sanmilan, 23, the boat's pilot, was credited with saving the life of his father, Guillermo Dominguez Delagarza, 58, the nagivator.

Race organizer Bill Hayward said the younger Dominguez, who suffered a broken arm and leg, swam through the rapids to rescue his father to shore before collapsing himself.

Dominguez Sr., who suffered leg injuries, was reported in serious condition in hospital but was expected to survive.

"I had to help him," Dominquez Jr. said before being flown to Edmonton with his father. "I could see he was injured and didn't think he would make it by himself."

It was the second consecutive year that the race, which has just been given world championship status, claimed a life. Last year, Hans Schenk, 36, of Edmonton died in the 900-kilometre race.

Dal Lewis, 21, of Calgary, in a support boat, was one of the first to reach the scene of the accident.

"We heard the roar of the engine die to an idle only after 40 seconds after the start and went to investigate," Lewis said.

"The boat had been taking an 80-degree lefthand bend in the river when it struck the outside wall of the canyon. Jagged rock, which looked like fibreglass, had been broken off at the point of impact."

Late Friday, the ill-fated one-ton white Mexican boat was pulled from the river.

"The crew had invested some $15,000 in the boat," said George Garcia, 23, a mechanic with another Mexican entry.

"The men thought they had a real chance in their first Canadian river boat race and made the drive up from Mexico two days ago in high spirits. They came in third last year in the Mexican Rio Balsas international race."

Grant Handle, president of the River Boating Association of Alberta, said all participants know "there is a risk of death in any dangerous sport" and the race will go on despite the tragedy.

With Miss Jetka out of the race, 30 boats from Canada, the United States, Mexico, New Zealand, Britain and West Germany remain in the race to compete for nearly $50,000 in prize money. The race ends in Edmonton July 30.

Liberated All The Way

QUEBEC (CP) — Sexually liberated couples are apparently in favor of a liberated Quebec, says a story in the monthly magazine of the intergovernmental affairs department.

The story is an adaptation of a report in a University of Quebec magazine on the research of sociologist Jacques Lazure into the lifestyles and attitudes of 75 "new" couples—young men and women between the ages of 18 and 30 who live together for an average of two years without being married.

"Politically, 80 per cent of the men and 85 per cent of the women who make up these new couples are in favor of Quebec's independence," says the last paragraph in the two-page story.

Lightkeeper Pay Boost

OTTAWA (CP) — The keepers of foghorns and lighthouses have voted to accept a new contract that will raise the minimum pay to $12,518 a year.

Most of the 530 employees, represented by the Public Service Alliance of Canada (PSAC), will earn between $12,518 a year and $13,353 a year under the new agreement.

Average salaries under the old contract were between $11,918 and $12,753 a year.

The one-year contract will expire Dec. 24.

GLASSHOUSE NEXT!

OTTAWA (CP) — Nine Mounties got their man early Friday morning after he literally dropped in on them when he fell through the roof of a glass greenhouse at the Governor-General's official residence.

Police said a man was spotted early Friday walking erratically on the grounds of Government House. When an RCMP officer ordered him to stop, he scrambled up the greenhouse to escape. He crashed through the roof, causing about $150 damage.

As he sat dazed after the fall, he was arrested by nine Mounties.

Charged with being drunk in a public place was John Alan Lowe, 27, of Ottawa.

Greenpeace Invokes Ancient Nfld. Law

CORNER BROOK (CP) — Charges of violating an old Newfoundland law which prohibits sealing on Sunday were laid Friday against the captains of two sealing vessels by Patrick Moore, president of the Greenpeace Foundation.

The charges against Jim Gillett of St. John's, captain of the Arctic Endeavor, and Ulf Snarby, skipper of the Arctic Explorer, were laid in provincial court here.

Moore brought similar charges earlier this week against Captain Morrisey Johnson of the vessel Lady Johnston Two and John Lundrigan, Progressive Conservative member of the Newfoundland legislature for Grand Falls.

The charges were laid under a section of the Seal Fishery Act, a statute passed in Newfoundland before it became a Canadian province in 1949.

The three skippers and Lundrigan are charged with killing seals on Sunday, March 12.

Gillett and Snarby also are charged with bringing into the port of Dildo, Nfld., seals killed on a Sunday, also contrary to the Seal Fishery Act.

The maximum penalty under the statute is a fine of $2,000. Any ship involved in a conviction also could be forbidden to take part in the seal hunt for up to two years.

Moore was here to be tried in provincial court on a charge of interfering with the seal hunt on March 18. Judgement was reserved in the week-long trial which ended Friday.

Cut CLC Ties, Unions Urged

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canadian unions need to break away from international unions and the United States-dominated Canadian Labor Congress to gain autonomy, according to Jess Succamore, national secretary of the Canadian Association of Industrial, Mechanical and Allied Workers.

Succamore, a spokesman for the Confederation of Canadian Unions, says U.S. control of this week's Canadian convention of construction unions in Toronto is an example of why "we've got to shed the yoke of U.S. domination."

He says officers of the British Columbia and Yukon Building Trades Council are angered that the chairman of the two-day convention was an American who appointed the 17-member board of the new Canadian building trades organization.

If Canada is to be independent from U.S. economic control it needs an independent trade union movement, Succamore claims.

HOME-GROWN BAND TO PLAY

The All British Columbia Bicentennial Band will give a performance on the lawn in front of the Legislative Buildings Tuesday at 8 p.m.

The 110-piece concert marching band, comprised mostly of high school students, is on its second summer tour and has performed at the International Band Festival in Vancouver, the Spokane World's Fair Pavilion and various communities throughout B.C.

Its tour has been extended to perform for Prince Phillip and Prince Andrew in Vancouver August 8.

The band was formed by combining the Vancouver based Beefeater band with musicians from all over B.C., six of them from Victoria.

The Victoria students are: Dale Hallier and Laurel Curtis, both 16, of Reynolds; Lenora Boardman, 16, of Dunsmuir; Heather Lyne, 15, of Dunsmuir; Bert Menear, 16, of Victoria High and Colleen O'Donnell, 17, a music student at the University of Victoria.

HERITAGE WINNERS TO VISIT

Victoria and Vancouver are voyages of discovery, according to the National Museums of Canada.

A contest was held for youths between the ages of 13 and 16, where they had to build a model, write an essay or produce a film on an aspect of Canadian heritage.

The winners, 377 in all, will visit the Provincial Museum, the Legislative Buildings, the Chinese Cultural Centre in Vancouver and the MacMillan Planetarium.

New Rights Team Set

Labor Minister Allan Williams will soon appoint a 10-member Human Rights Commission, replacing the five commissioners whose terms expired Dec. 31, 1977, he said Friday.

His recommendations have been given to cabinet members for study and he is hopeful the matter will be dealt with at a cabinet meeting next week, he added.

The minister has been under some pressure from civil rights groups and opposition MLAs to reactivate the commission.

Former commission chairman Remi de Roo, Roman Catholic Bishop of Victoria, said in an interview he has been concerned about the minister's delay in appointing new commissioners.

He said after four years of work the previous commission had raised a number of expectations among those with human rights problems.

More and more people were coming to the commission for help and not having such a body to turn to has left a definite gap, de Roo said.

Aside from doubling the number on the commission, Williams said there will be greater regional representation.

The previous commission was made up of representatives from only Victoria and Vancouver.

TUDOR ESTATE
SWIMMING POOL
TOTALLY SECLUDED
A magnificent 4 bedroom Tudor residence on almost 3 acres of totally secluded and beautifully treed garden, with panoramic views of the sea and islands. The land slopes down to a valley, with a heated and filtered 40x20 swimming pool on a fully fenced terrace. Full reception hall complete with electric elevator to the bedrooms upstairs. Grand drawing room with marble-faced fireplace, formal dining room with direct access to a raised patio for that after-dinner drink on a summer evening. 4 bathrooms, Oak parquet floors. Spacious den with fireplace and French doors to a second patio and secluded lawn. The kitchen is superb, beam decor, separate breakfast room and including Jenaire barbeque, double wall ovens, ceramic hotpoint cooktop, instant hot water, dishwasher — a completely and tastefully modern dream kitchen. Full upstairs balcony, ideal for private sunbathing and always that spectacular view of the sea and islands. Offered at $265,000

American Express

American Express Corp. had earnings of $79.1 million, or $1.11 a share, in the second quarter, the New York-based travel and financial services company reported.

Earnings increased 18 per cent from the $67 million or 94 cents a share for the same period last year while revenues climbed about 22 per cent to $1.02 billion from $838.4 million for the three months a year ago.

For the first six months, the company earned $141.3 million, or $1.98 a share, on revenues of $1.94 billion. For the comparable period last year, the company's earnings were $117 million, or $1.63 a share, on revenues of 1.90 billion.

American Express, originally formed in 1850, sells money orders and travelers cheques and provides credit card, travel, international banking and insurance services.

Republic Steel

Republic Steel Corp. said its profit for the second quarter rose to $31.36 million, or $1.94 a share, a gain of 41 per cent from the $22.18 million, or $1.37 a share during last year's second quarter. It said sales increased to $910.8 million from $776.8 million.

Republic's six-month profit rose to $41.13 million, or $2.54 a share, from $16.03 million, or 99 cents a share. Sales rose to $1.74 billion during the period compared with $1.43 billion in the same period a year ago.

FRANCHISE
Wholesale Janitors' Supplies

Rapidly expanding Vancouver Island System, providing Wholesale Janitors' Supplies, building maintenance equipment and industrial paper products, offers a licencee, located in Courtenay, or Campbell River. A profitable business opportunity in the Courtenay, Campbell River and Powell River areas. We will licence the franchise and back it with successful merchandising techniques, comprehensive training, good marketing and management assistance. Established contracts will be transfered which include Schools, Hotels, Motels, Municipalities, Hospitals, and businesses. The licencee should have previous business experience and knowledge of janitorial products will be useful but not essential, providing that the licencee is willing to become quickly familiar with the product lines. Licencee would be required to provide suitable delivery vehicles, minimum cash requirement $23,500.

ABACUS APPOINTMENT

J. GEORGE STRACHAN, F.R.S.A, LL.D.

Mr. William H. Rogers, President of Abacus Cities Ltd., is pleased to announce the appointment of J. George Strachan, F.R.S.A, LL.D., as President and Executive Director of Gillain Manor Ltd.

A pioneer in the field of alcohol studies, Dr. Strachan was born in Montreal and educated in Canada and the U.S., majoring in business administration.

In 1972, Dr. Strachan was elected a Fellow of the Royal Society of Arts, London, England and in 1973 he received an Honorary Doctorate of Laws Degree from the University of Alberta, Edmonton.

After devoting a major portion of his lifetime to treatment of alcoholism Dr. Strachan in 1973 began development of Gillain Manor, a treatment centre on Mount Newton on Vancouver Island. The project encountered financial difficulties but has now been taken over by Abacus Cities Ltd., who have ensured its completion. Gillain Manor Ltd., a wholly owned subsidiary of Abacus Cities Ltd., is slated to open in late September, 1978.

Ousted Ford VP Shuns Chrysler

DETROIT (AP) — Lee Iacocca, ousted last week as president of Ford Motor Co., won't be moving over to rival Chrysler Corp., directors of the No. 3 U.S. automaker say.

Speculation among auto industry observers here in the week since Henry Ford II removed Iacocca was that Chrysler, reeling under a nearly $120 million first-quarter loss and facing a declining share of the auto market, would offer Iacocca a top job.

Chrysler's top officers, chairman John Riccardo and president Eugene Cafiero, have no sales background and Chrysler's top two sales executives resigned in March. Iacocca's strength at Ford was sales and marketing.

Last week, a group of Chrysler dealers sent a telegram to corporate officials recommending the hiring of Iacocca.

But Chrysler board members, canvassed Wednesday by the Detroit News, insist such move has not been seriously considered.

"I'm satisfied with the leadership at Chrysler," said Gabriel Hauge, a Chrysler director and chairman of Manufacturers Hanover Corp. in New York. "We have two fine people. Whenever there is a change in Detroit auto industry, the rumors start flying."

Hauge, considered an influential board member because his bank is the agent for $463 million in revolving credit commitments obtained by Chrysler, said Iacocca's name has not come up at board meetings.

One unidentified director, however, said hiring Iacocca would be "a fantastic move that would keep Chrysler in the eyes of the world as it challenged Ford with one of its own men." But he added, "Chrysler can't afford him."

Iacocca has been one of the highest-paid U.S. businessmen, earning nearly $1 million last year. Riccardo and Cafiero made less than half that amount.

Iacocca has been unavailable for comment since he lost the power struggle with Henry Ford II. His wife, Mary, said Wednesday he has been out of town all week.

Industry analysts feel Chrysler's hiring of Iacocca would be a logical move, but one said "Chrysler has immediate problems. Anyone coming in could not change the course of the company for 24 to 36 months."

Stock Boom In Tokyo

TOKYO (Reuter) — Stock prices on the Tokyo stock market have soared to their highest level since the Second World War eight times this month.

The visible trade, current account and overall balance of payments surpluses, which reached record levels in the financial year ended last March, all rose sharply in June compared with May, according to preliminary figures announced Wednesday.

Debts Run Into Millions

DELTA (CP) — Failure to sell subdivision lots and labor troubles at an ice arena have left Mayor Tom Goode with millions of dollars in debts incurred by his companies.

A dozen foreclosure cases filed since January in B.C. Supreme Court registries name three property companies with which Goode is involved, his investment company and Goode himself.

Goode, 45, mayor of this municipality for almost five years, says the development and property companies have paid off $4 million in debts, leaving $3 million to go.

He said the money raised so far to pay off mortgages has come from sales of land and lots by Scott Rd. Holdings and Chalk Holdings Ltd., both of which he is president, and Fraser Valley Arenas (1975) Ltd. of which he is a 12.5-per-cent shareholder.

The total amount listed in the lawsuits is just over $1 million, but Goode said repayments and decisions have reduced this to about $300,000.

He said Chalk Holdings has about $3 million outstanding in mortgages and demand notes but some of these are in good standing.

Chalk has about $4 million left in assets after paying off another $4 million in mortgages, he said. The company is involved in three subdivisions in the Guilford area of Surrey, one of 122 lots, one of 106 lots and one of 20.

He said failure to sell any lots in the 106-lot subdivision for six months led to the financial troubles, although all the lots have been sold in the last two months.

He said Fraser Valley's ice arena at Chilliwack was struck by the Teamsters' union last winter and the company has been unable to rent the ice.

Cherry Trees Destroyed

KELOWNA (CP) — About 17 cherry trees in the Kelowna area will have to be destroyed after they were found to have little cherry disease, Helmut Arndt, district horticulturist with the ministry of agriculture, said Friday.

The diseased trees were discovered this week during a ministry survey aimed at tracking down any invested orchards.

"It is becoming a major problem here," Arndt said.

It has not yet been determined exactly what causes the disease and how it spreads.

A sudden outbreak of the disease in the Penticton and Naramanta areas last year resulted in about 300 cherry trees having to be destroyed.

Trial Ordered

VANCOUVER (CP) — Deborah Ann Hutt, 23, has been committed for higher court trial on a charge of defrauding the Vancouver Resources Board of $3,700.

Hutt was charged with receiving social assistance payments simultaneously in Langley and Vancouver between August 1976 and April 1977.

Hookers Deported

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ten women have been deported from Canada in the past 1½ months as a result of measures by the federal immigration department to stop the influx of American prostitutes into the city, immigration spokesman Walter Jennings said.

He said three women were deported for remaining in Canada for a period longer than they had informed customs officials. Six others were deported for remaining in Canada by misrepresentation or fraud by carrying false identification, and one for returning after she had already been deported.

LRT Downplayed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Regional government officials should substantially expand bus service before spending money on light rapid transit, a Greater Vancouver Regional District engineering preliminary study on rapid transit recommends.

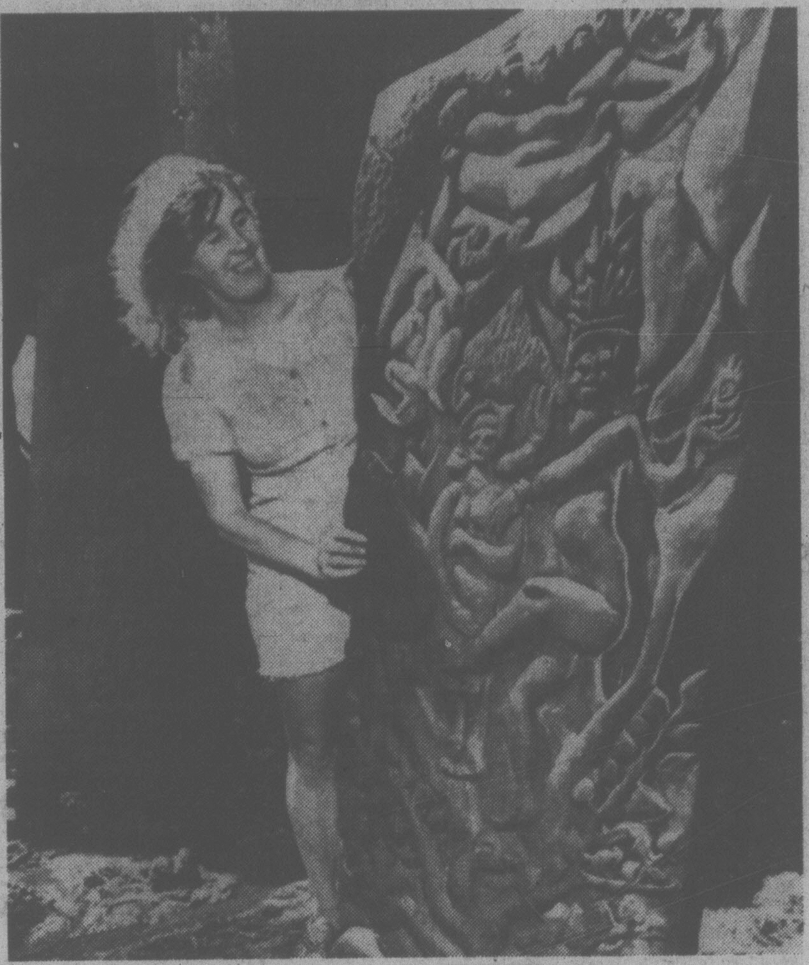
The study said an improved bus system can handle the region's transportation problems and might postpone spending hundreds of million of dollars on a light rapid transit system for up to 10 years.

It also suggests that a suspended aerobus or monorail system be built to connect the Surrey, New Westminster and Coquitlam-Port Coquitlam areas.

POLLUTION RAP

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canadian Pacific Ltd. and its transport subsidiary, Canadian Pacific Transportation Co. Ltd., have been charged with polluting Burrard Inlet following an oil spill near False Creek marina here May 17.

Keith Hebron, an investigating officer with Environment Canada, said Thursday that the spill occurred because an oil separator was overtaxed, but the cleanup operation was successful.



FOUND in the crawlspace of a pier at Vancouver's Jericho Beach were the four panels, valued at about $15,000 and created by Georganna Malloff (above), which were stolen more than a year ago from an old aircraft hangar nearby.

Gov't Buildings Tallied

The British Columbia Buildings Corporation is conducting the first precise inventory of buildings used by the provincial government, the government said Friday.

The government said in its publication B.C. Government News that the computer inventory of government-used buildings will replace a large ledger that has been used for 100 years.

The government said that at the end of May, the corporation reported that there were at least 2,731 corporation-owned buildings in addition to about a dozen government-owned buildings that are serviced by the corporation.

Total space owned and leased by the government is about 1.6 million square metres.

Nurses Not Welcome

VANCOUVER (CP) — Larry Truitt, president of Vancouver General Hospital, says he will not accept the reinstatement of three clinical nursing directors — fired June 1 for refusing to back hospital administration — until he has met with them personally.

The lawyer for the three nurses, Allan Black, said June Nakamoto, Win Miller and Lorea Ytterberg "have accepted the offers of reinstatement without any conditions attached."

Black said the nurses informed the hospital board of their decision in letters delivered to VGH lawyers on Thursday.

He said they are not planning to take any court action and are not seeking any compensation other than for lost pay.

However, Truitt said there were many conditions to reinstatement and that a carte blanche rehiring would not take place until he had met with the nurses.

Truitt said one of the conditions that has to be met is job description.

He said that he could only speak with the nurses through Black and that a meeting with the nurses would be arranged as soon as possible.

The nurses were were fired by Dorothy Babcock, acting director of nursing, when they said they couldn't agree with the new administrative structure and methods of communication with top management.

On June 30 hospital board chairman Milton Wong offered to re-instate the three nurses on the recommendation of a three-member review committee which investigated the situation.

At that time, Black said they were in no hurry to return to their jobs as they were waiting for a summary of findings by committee head Angelo Branca.

Blockade Comes Down Rail Traffic Resumes

CRANBROOK (CP) — Railway traffic in southeastern British Columbia returned to normal Friday night after the St. Mary's Indian Band removed its barricade from the Canadian Pacific Railway line near here.

The action followed an agreement-in-principle between the band and CP Rail earlier Friday in Vancouver for compensation for reserve land eroded by construction of a 30-metre section of rail line.

About 150 band members halted almost all east-west rail traffic over the Crownest Pass by erecting the plywood barrier July 7. The band had blocked the line periodically since February.

Bob Ferguson, CP Rail spokesman in Vancouver, would not release details of the agreement. But he said earlier that CP Rail had offered the band either $200,000 or 666 acres as compensation for the 72 acres lost by erosion.

Band officials say between 80 and 100 acres have been eroded by the St. Mary's River since CP Rail diverted the river's course northward in 1969 to protect the line from erosion.

Band administrator Lloyd Lezard said this week that the band wanted 2,800 acres in compensation for land which he said will be eroded in the future. He said the band wanted land because "money doesn't last that long."

CP Rail lifted an embargo on freight shipments in and out of the area, in effect since July 11, after the agreement was reached.

The company said 125 B.C. employees who were laid off at Cranbrook, Nelson and Trail last week will be recalled over the next few days as operations return to normal.

BEER: Isn't a Regular Supply An Essential Service?

max low

Talk about uncivilized drinking and essential services!

Who was? Well, I was about to.

Now you may not feel there's any connection between the two but I'm starting to think maybe there is.

I used to believe that, compared with the more sedate atmosphere in British pubs, the wild and woolly Australian hotels, the crazy drinking hours in New Zealand and the way they regarded beer in Iran was all very uncivilized.

When I lived Down Under quite a few years ago, the pubs used to close at 6 p.m. That made a lot of sense particularly as the Kiwis (who love their beer) mostly finish work at 5:30 and each day took part in what became known as the Six O'Clock Swill.

In that mad half an hour, everyone would see how many beers they could knock back and then take to the streets and aim their cars at one another. That has since changed, of course, with the introduction of 10:30 p.m. closing.

But then, after living in lands where beer was king, I was somewhat shocked when working on a paper in Tehran to find the Iranians mainly regarded abijou (their word for beer) as something with which you chased a good stiff Vodka.

Yet surely there is nothing as uncivilized as trying to drink beer when there isn't any! And, as the Great B.C. Beer Strike drags on and the sun gets hotter and thirstier every day, that's just the position we are finding ourselves in.

It was about five minutes to 10 Friday morning when I thought I'd pop down to the government liquor store on the corner of Gorge Road and Tillicum to see if there was a chance of picking up a case for the weekend.

The place had been besieged!

Although the store was not yet open, there wasn't a parking space to be had for miles and hundreds of people were lined up across the shopping centre and right up the street. The whole thing was reminiscent of ration book days in Wartime London.

Word had got around apparently that there was a truckload of Olympia beer arriving from Washington.

Now at $11.58 for two dozen (which was all each person was allowed) that was a pretty good bargain compared with German and Dutch beer some of which has been selling at more than $12 a dozen, or over $1 a bottle!

Thirsty Tom Harkins left happily clutching two cases of Oly and said he'd been there since 9 o'clock.

"But the line started before 8:30 I understand as there were about 40 people here when I came," Tome told me.

When the 600 dozen ran out at 10:35, the queue still stretched across the lot and up Tillicum. They were all there, the elderly, the young doing a bit of sunbathing at the same time, women giving their babies their morning bottle of milk.

A man who got the last lucky case said he'd been lining up since 9:30. More went away empty handed than satisfied but no one seemed to get too upset.

A gent in the liquor store office confirmed that there had indeed been 600 cases. And, yes that's right, they went in 35 minutes.

"They would have gone a lot quicker than that, too, if we hadn't had to keep closing the door," he explained.

Fearing a mad frenzy inside, they only let about 25 people in at a time.

A mad frenzy over beer? Sure. And doesn't it start to seem terribly uncivilized?

Which brings me to my second point: We hear a lot about such things as ferries, hospitals and the post office as being "essentail services" that should not be paralyzed by strikes.

But seriously, who really cares whether they get their bills in the mail or not? What about beer? Now that's an essential service!

And after all, the government can't lose. A legislated return to work in the beer dispute and a new flow of the once-familiar amber liquid would do a lot more to put smiles on the faces of those tourists than all of Mrs. McCarthy's buttons put together.

And about those two modern-day "smugglers" caught while trying to land 120 cases of American beer on a remote stretch of beach on the Island.

Where's our sense of adventure? Instead of talking about charging them we should maybe consider declaring them heroes in the battle against thirst and decorating them with medals. After all, at least they did something to try to alleviate the pain.

How did the words of that sad Aussie song go . . .

"Oh there's nothing so
lonesome, morbid or drear
Than to stand in the bar of a pub with no beer."

3 Charged In Murder

Three men have been charged with second degree murder in connection with the savage beating death of a 37-year-old Port Alberni man in the city early Friday.

William Charles August, 25, no fixed address, George Alexander Charlie, 24, and Alfred Eugene Johnny, 32, both of 639 Constance, were remanded in custody to next week after appearing before a justice of the peace in provincial court this morning.

Victoria police identified the victim as George Preston Gus.

Two passers-by discovered Gus's body at 7:25 a.m. Friday. It was lying amidst scrap metal in a vacant lot below Store Street next to the Johnson Street Bridge.

Staff Sgt. Ed Hardy of the city detective division said Gus had been severely beaten. A wooden club, believed the murder weapon, was found nearby.

An autopsy revealed Gus died of massive bleeding and fluids in his lungs, the result of extensive injuries to his head and ribs.

He was unable to say when the attack took place, but it apparently was several hours earlier.

Hardy said Johnny was arrested by police about 8 a.m. walking on Wharf Street, about three blocks from the scene.

The other two were nabbed by RCMP in Nanaimo around noon.

Hardy declined to release what police believe to be the motive for the attack.

The area where the body was found is well-known to police as a haunt for winos.

Extra Coach An E&N 'First'

Decision by CP Rail to add a rail car to the E & N train is the first time the public has won anything in an eight-year campaign to save the service, says John Cooper, chairman of an E & N employees association.

The company Friday said it would add an 89-passenger car to the present 71-passenger unit starting July 28.

The E & N had been turning passengers away because the coach was full.

The run from Victoria became popular after fares were reduced July 8 to $3 to Duncan, $5 to Nanaimo, $6 to Parksville and $8 to Courtenay.

Premier Bennett earlier this week had sent a telegram to CP Rail urging that an extra car be put on the run to handle the overflow crowds.

The premier is also campaigning to save the service which is scheduled to terminate Dec. 13.

Cooper said the quick response by CP Rail to the premier's request was gratifying.

"To move the CPR is really something. It's the first time in eight years of pressing for action that we've achieved anything."

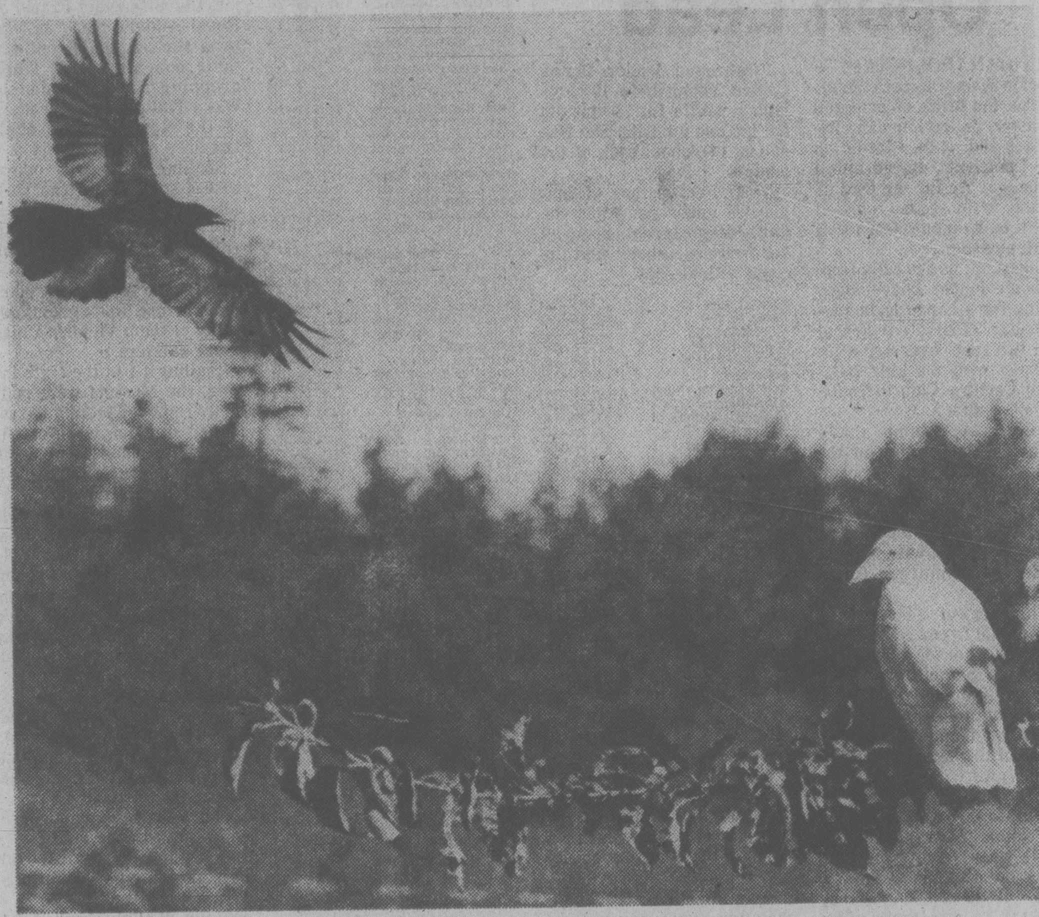
Cycle Registry To Cut Thefts

Victoria and Saanich police will hold bicycle registrations Sunday, July 30, 1 to 4 p.m., at The Bay parkade, Blanshard Street entrance, Town and Country shopping centre and at K Mart.

Social Insurance Numbers are required. Children without numbers should use their parents.

Bicycles are given a sticker with a serial number and then stamped in a hidden place with the SIN number to reduce thefts and make it easier to identify and return found bicycles.



WHITEY THE CROW has created a small sensation for residents of the Sayward Road area. It may be the first white crow in the region for 25 years. Provincial museum ornithologist Keith Taylor says there was a report of a white crow in Victoria 25 years ago. He adds that pure albinos have pink eyes but no one has reported in on Whitey's eye color. He was seen by Mrs. Violet O'Sullivan of 850 Sayward, who feeds bread to the crows, and confirmed by Times photographer Bill Halkett. A pink-eyed albino crows has white feathers and body while a white crow has white feathers only.

Beer Running Up the Straits

Reports of beer sales in American coastal ports would indicate that not since the days of prohibition has so much booze been carried on the seas between Canada and the United States.

According to store owners business is booming.

Beer sales are up anywhere from 50 to 100 per cent.

"We've got beer stacked in places where they've never been stacked before," said an employee of Whitey's Food Centre in Friday Harbor.

Another store owner on San Juan Island said he's getting a shipment of between 500 to 600 cases every two days and that's barely enough to meet the demand.

"There must be a lot of thirsty Canadians," the manager of Albertson's store in Port Angeles said.

He said he can always spot a Canadian because he's the one with five or six cases in his shopping cart.

Most of the sales are in the range of three to six cases.

There are exceptions, however. An employee of the Roach Harbor Resort and General Store said he spent last Saturday amused by the antics of two men in a 14-foot boat who made at least seven trips carrying 10 or 12 cases each time.

"None of us here could believe it. Those guys were on the run all day. They'd load up the cases on a furniture dolly and race down to their boat. They'd jam them in and then they'd head off. I wouldn't have thought the boat would hold that much, especially as one of guys had to be six foot two and 300 pounds with an enormous beer gut."

Sgt. Fred Jenkins of the RCMP customs branch in Victoria said there are no indications of large amounts being smuggled into the country, at least not on an organized basis.

Most, he said, are independent operators. Like the trio of Chemainus men who were nabbed unloading American beer off their boat at Island View Beach July 14.

In that incident police seized 141½ cases of beer. The three will appear in Victoria provincial court next Tuesday charged with smuggling beer and possession of smuggled beer. The penalties range from a minimum $200 fine to a maximum $1,000 fine and three years in prison.

A customs official said a Canadian resident can bring in 24 bottles of beer once every calendar quarter without duty provided he's been out of the country for 48 hours or more. He can bring in up to two gallons paying duty, but no more.

Eagle Still the Main Attraction

If Victorians Love Sails, That's Nothing Compared To Sailors Feeling for City

The Eagle will put up some sails at 4 p.m. this afternoon, leaving them in place until 8 p.m.

There will be similar sail-raising demonstrations at 9:30 a.m. and 4 p.m. Sunday.

The crew raised two sails this morning, creating an instant crowd of 2,000. Brochures, Eagle buttons and Eagle token dollars were handed out. The tokens, the size of a silver dollar, were minted for the U.S. Coast Guard Academy centenary and the U.S. bicentenary, both in 1976.

Crowds built up during the day as regatta events were held but the main attraction continued to be the Eagle.

Crew members were still talking about the 10,000 who turned out to greet their arrival Thursday.

"I've never seen anything like it in my life," one Eagle cadet said.

Another commented: "This harbor is terrific. What a lovely, clean city. I wish my city (Boston) was as clean as this."

Another: "The Victoria girls! Wow!

Another: "This is tremendous. We didn't expect anything like this."

Wind conditions are judged too brisk for a full sail demonstration while the Eagle is docked, but K.W. Nancarrow, cadet officer of the day, said partial demonstrations would be held regularly through the weekend so spectators could get an idea of the work involved.

Present schedule, he said, is for sail raisings at 9:30 a.m. and 4 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

Best view of the Eagle, however, might come early Monday morning. Very early.

Some, possibly all, sails will go up as the Eagle leaves the Inner Harbor for Vancouver. Class B vessels will be under sail as well.

Preparations to leave will begin at 6 a.m. and the parade of sail is expected to be under way by 7 a.m.

They will leave the Inner Harbor and then proceed along the Victoria waterfront towards Vancouver.

The Eagle will spend the summer on the west coast, going to Seattle and then San Francisco. The Eagle spends most of the year at the cadet academy at New London, Connecticut.

It entered the Inner Harbor under sail but with its 750 horsepower diesel engine on, to help guide the vessel. It will leave the same way.

Open house for handicapped people began at 9 a.m. today, followed by senior citizens, until 11 a.m. The same schedule will be followed Sunday. General open house is from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m.

Open house is being held during the same hours for two Japanese military vessels docked at Esquimalt.

Closing ceremonies for the Capt. Cook festival will begin at 8 p.m. Sunday on the lawn of the legislature, followed by fireworks at 10 p.m.

Crowds were larger than expected Thursday but smaller Friday and Saturday morning.

They were expected to reach a peak tonight and Sunday.

The Visitors Information Centre reported there were a small number of empty hotel and motel rooms in the area for the second consecutive night. The region had been sold out Tuesday and Wednesday but crowds declined slightly the past two nights.

Visitors Information Centre president Ted Balderson said: "There is a good-sized crowd in the city. It is not too busy to create problems but enough to fill most places.

"It looks like Victoria will have a record tourist year."

June crowds far exceeded expectations. So far in July the picture has been mixed but it could be the busiest July ever.

August is normally the busiest month of the year.

Jetfoil service began today, adding to the inflow of visitors. It leaves Seattle at 9 a.m., arriving at 11 a.m. and leaves Victoria at 2 p.m., arriving at 4 p.m. It is being run in Victoria by Black Ball. Reservations are required. Cost one way is $19.

It runs five days a week, Thursday through Monday.

Two cruise ships were also in the city today.

Rick's 68 Perfect Squelch

By DOUG PEDEN
Times Sports Editor

Rick Gibson produced a perfect squelch for the gloom-dispensers of the fairways Friday at Uplands Golf Club in the third round of the British Columbia Amateur golf championship.

"Rick is feeling the pressure, he's coming apart," was the message circulating around the scoreboard after the little, blond Victorian had gone bogey, par, double-bogey to be three over par after three holes.

Gibson's answer was immediate and impressive. It resulted in a two-under-par 68 on the demanding, 6,278-yard Uplands layout that, in addition to embarrassing the quick critics, kept Rick in second place and trimmed the lead of five-time provincial champion Doug Roxburgh to five strokes.

Roxburgh, the 26-year-old Vancouver account who appears determined to enter his third successive Amateur title in the ledger, was finally betrayed somewhat by his wood clubs and his putter. Aided by good fortune when he pushed tee shots on the 13th and 16th holes, Roxie still struck enough of his great shots to salvage an even-par 70 for a four-under tally of 206 after 54 holes of the 70-hole event that wound up today.

Gibson, this year's provincial high school golf king, was at 211, one shot ahead of charging Brent Murray, the Oregon State Amateur champion who equalled the course record Friday with a sizzling 66.

Another two strokes back was Victoria's Dave Mick, who continued his never-say-die battle to recover from misfortunes of the first two days and mixed two birdies with one bogey on each nine for a solidly-played 68 and a three-day count of 214.

Trailing Mick by one were Scott Alexander, the Puget Sound Amateur titleholder from Bremerton and Steve Chapman, an England-born resident of Prince Geroge who provided some of the most spectacular of Friday's action.

Chapman, a student at the University of Tulsa, started with an eagle deuce on the 410-yard first hole and followed with a birdie three on the second. That resulted in a gain of four strokes on Roxburgh, who three-putted for a bogey on two, but things didn't continue that way.

Mixing bogeys, birdies and double-bogeys over the remainder of the route. Chapman finished at 71, losing another shot to the leader.

Another spectacular performer as Friday's shotmaking produced the most sub-par rounds of any tournament day, was Steve Berry of Delta. One over after six holes, Berry turned on the afterburners and scorched the course the rest of the way. He eagled the par-five seventh and went on to post a 67, for a three-round total of 216.

While Roxburgh appeared the probable winner started today's final tour, Gibson and Murray loomed as dangerous contenders, with Murray perhaps having the best chance of catching the former Canadian Amateur champ.

Murray, 23, the Pac-8 (university) Conference champion who graduated in economics this year from the University of Oregon, has the experience and big-hitting game to fashion another sub-par tally.

"I made fewer mental mistakes today," he said after Friday's round had included an eagle on the seventh, three birdies, including a two-putt job on the 291-yard 13th, and one bogey.

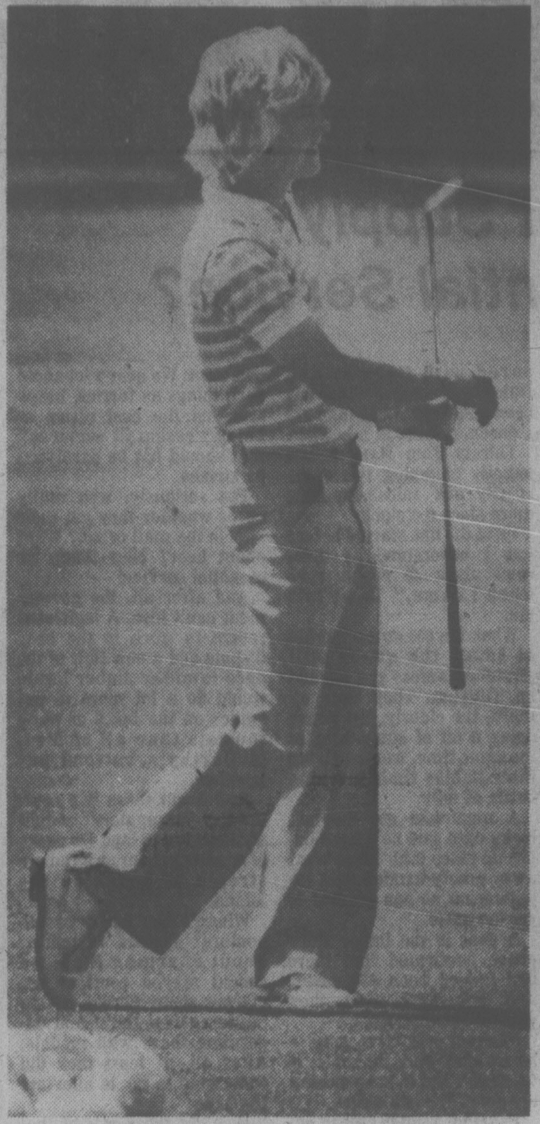
Despite some super shotmaking by his rivals, the big story of the first three days had to be the one written by Gibson, still eligible to compete in juvenile ranks.

Golf talent is a fickle thing in youngsters, sometimes flourishing, sometimes fading. But, for this week at least, Gibson has displayed a remarkable poise and a sound swing that suggests possible future greatness.

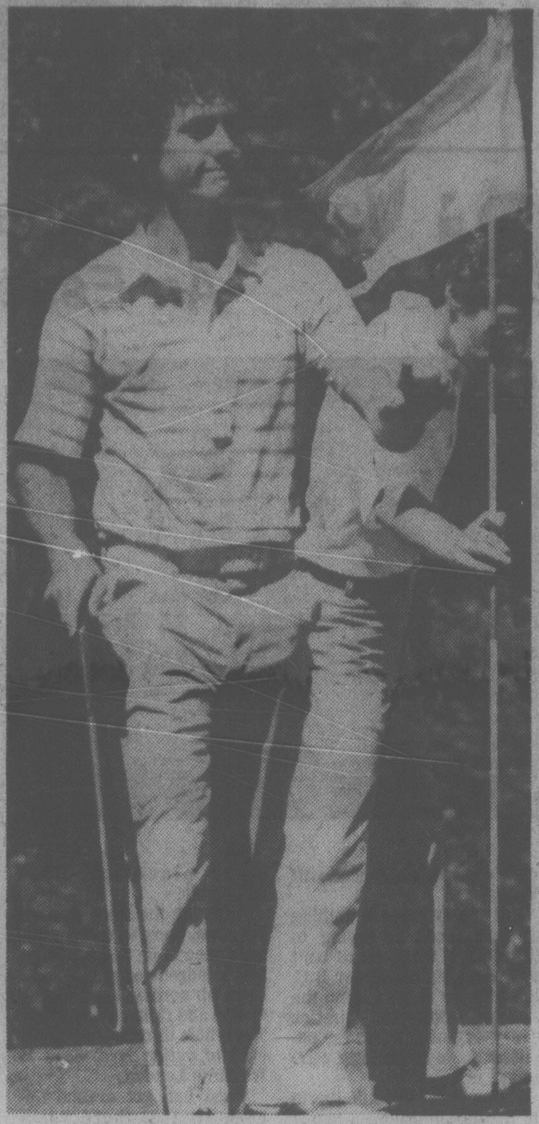
He remained as cool as a penguin's feet Friday after his doubley-bogey on the third, where he put his tee shot close to a tree, half-shanked an attempted low shot, chipped on and three-putted.

His immediate answer for the "wiseguys" was a birdie deuce on the next hole. His more permanent reply was a solid, bogey-free performance the rest of the way as he trimmed his score with birds on the seventh, eighth, 10th and 12th holes.

Not so fortunate was another young Victorian, Stu Holroyd, who had also surprised the "experts" by holding down third place after two rounds. On a day when nothing would go right, Holroyd struggled to an 80 Friday and slipped back into the pack at 224.



RICK GIBSON watches result of shot that led to birdie on 10th hole Friday.



STEVE CHAPMAN holds ball after birdie on 13. Doug Roxburgh replaces flag.

STU HOLROYD chips in rough after running into trouble on ninth hole.

Lopez Shares Open Lead

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Rookie Nancy Lopez, teetering on the brink of potential disaster, pulled her game together and, with a birdie on the final hole, moved into a three-way tie for the lead on Friday in the second round of the U.S. Women's Open golf championship.

Lopez, 21, had to rally from a bogie-double bogey-bogey string for a hard-fought two-over-par 73 that put her at 144, two shots over par after 36 holes over the hilly 6,115-yard Country Club of Indianapolis course.

"Boy, that's dumb, really dumb," Lopez said after the bogey stretch had knocked her out of sole control of the lead.

She shared the lead at the halfway point with Donna White and amateur Carol Semple.

The perky, 24-year-old White, like Lopez completing her rookie season this week, had a 72. Semple, a former national amateur champion and a longtime amateur competitor, had a par 71, the best round of the hot, humid day.

At 145 were defending titleholder Hollis Stacy, two-time champion JoAnne Carner and amateur Cynthia Hill.

"It was a pretty hectic day," the disappointed Stacy said. "It's a golf course that you try to minimize your mistakes—I got a lot of them out of the way today."

First-round leader Donna Caponi Young blew 10 shots higher with a fat 78 that did not include a birdie. She was at 146, two shots back of the leaders.

Vicki Fergon, one of four players under par when the day's play started, bogeyed her first seven holes and finished with 81—151.

'Caps Topple Timbers

Vancouver Whitecaps blanked Portland 2-0 Friday to strengthen their hold on first place in the Western Division of the North American Soccer League.

Kevin Hector scored both goals for Vancouver to hand Portland its second consecutive loss before 23,536 fans.

In other games, New York Cosmos defeated Oakland Stompers 5-1 and Fort Lauderdale Strikers edged Philadelphia Fury 1-0.

The victory gave the Whitecaps a 20-win, six-loss record and moved the Whitecaps into a 16-point lead over second-place Portland, 18-9.

The Umpire Mussels In

Even the umpire muscled into the miscue act Friday at Royal Athletic Park as Victoria Mussels again confused their coaching staff while dropping a 6-4 decision to Walla Walla Padres, leaders of the Northwest Baseball League's northern division.

Spoiling what was otherwise a solid effort, the Mussels lost a scoring opportunity with a mental lapse and added a pair of fielding errors to present the Padres with three unearned runs runs before 823 spectators, many of them Victoria Press paper carriers.

Trailing 4-1 in the sixth inning, the Mussels were suddenly removed from a bases-loaded situation when catcher Jim Thamann was caught in a rundown at third base became the third out.

Perhaps hurting the Victoria club even more was a ruling by umpire Mike Willman after Mussels' manager and third-baseman Jim Chapman had drawn a walk from Walla Walla Walla pitcher Mark Boggs, now 5-1 after Friday's victory.

With one out, pinch-hitter Paul Kirsch drilled a ground ball between first and second. It was apparently a hit, but the ball struck Willman, who promptly called Kirsch out.

That call does not appear to conform with the rule book, which states that a hit should be awarded on such an incident.

Walla Walla scored what proved to be the winning run on a sacrifice fly by Mike Parker in the seventh and Randy Putman rapped his seventh home run of the season for the Padres in the ninth.

Victoria scored once in the eighth inning on John Bush's sacrifice fly and got another two tallies in the ninth as Dan Gans connected for his fifth homer, driving in his 22nd and 23rd runs of the campaign.

Pitcher Dave Cheadle pitched his first complete game for the Mussels, yielding 11 hits.

In other league games Friday, Grays Harbor bombed Bellingham 14-3, Boise nipped Eugene 9-7 and Bend blanked Salem 3-0.

WESTLING WINS HONOR; MISSES VET TITLE

BISLEY, England (CP) — Gunnar Westling, 70, of Coquitlam, B.C., signed up with his son, Ken, 35, for the Families Challenge Cup but neglected to put his name down in the Veterans Trophy event at the National Rifle Association championships.

Both the former Queen's Prize winner and his son shot a 104 in the first stage of the Queen's Prize event, giving them an aggregate of 204 and the family championship by two points over two brothers from Surrey, England.

Ironically, the elder Westling would have won the Veterans Trophy also, if he had signed an entry card before competing. This is a side match to the Queen's Prize and is open to competitors over 65 years making the best score in the first stage.

This year, the trophy is shared by two British competitors who shot 101.

The Faunthorpe Challenge Trophy for the top-scoring overseas competitor in the Queen's Prize first stage was won by Pat Evans of Lasalle, Que., with a 104.

Philip Rates About Everywhere

EDMONTON (CP) — The 20-year-old from Victoria could hardly believe his eyes two months ago when he looked at the scoring during an international gymnastics meet in Vancouver.

"I just don't believe it," said Philip Delesalle after getting a perfect 10.0 for his routine on pommel horse. "Maybe a 9.8 or a 9.9, yes, but not a 10."

The top male gymnast in Canada had 4,800 fans at the Pacific Coliseum on their feet in a standing ovation after his performance in the most difficult of the gymnastic disciplines.

Delesalle's performance may have shocked some Canadians, but in international circles, he is quickly becoming well-known and respected, especially since his eighth-place finish last fall in Spain at the World Cup.

His perfect 10.0 at the Pacific Rim invitational meet in Vancouver was just another example of his vast talents in this event. Delesalle hopes his hard work will pay off with a medal at the Commonwealth Games.

The perfect score was the first time a Canadian has ever had such a tribute in international competition.

I'm glad it's over," Delesalle said after the meet. "People always expect much more of their own gymnasts and I hope they got what they were looking for."

Canadians will be looking for superb performances from Delesalle and tiny Karen Kelsall of Surrey at the Games.

It will be the first time gymnastics has been a recognized event at the Games but it was used as a demonstration sport in 1974 at Christchurch, New Zealand.

Delesalle has been globe trotting for the last year in an attempt to prove that he belongs with the best gymnasts in the world. Since placing 22nd at the Olympic Games in Montreal two years ago—the best a Canadian male has ever done in the Olympics—Delesalle has won the America Cup in New York, the Champions All meet in England and the Cup of the Slovak Revolution in Czechoslovakia.

He also has placed well in many other meets, including two in Russia. Delesalle easily took the Canadian national selection meet in April, but has not been totally recognized in Canada.

"He can walk down Granville Street and he'd be just another kid," said Keith Russel, the Canadian coach.

"But he can walk down a main street in a lot of European cities and be recognized

"He's famous over there and, in fact, in Russia the gymnasts have named several manoeuvres after him."

The Bear Doesn't Scare Ben

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Ben Crenshaw says he isn't afraid of the Golden Bear.

"There's still time," said Crenshaw, who appears to have regained a lost commodity: confidence.

Asked how he felt trailing the Golden Bear—Jack Nicklaus—by three strokes after two rounds of the $250,000 Philadelphia golf tournament, Crenshaw said: "I'm not giving up if that's what you're intimating."

Crenshaw shot a 67 Friday for a 36-hole total of 133. Despite his nine-under-par figure over the 6,615-yard Whitemarsh Valley Country Club course, the former University of Texas star, was exactly where he finished last week in the British Open—behind Nicklaus.

Crenshaw finished in a tie for second at St. Andrews in Scotaland, two strokes behind Nicklaus.

Crenshaw hasn't won on the Professional Golfers' Association tour since the 1977 Colonial. He said he lost his confidence when he started to hit the ball poorly.

Nicklaus, who holds 17 major championships, was as hot as the 32-degree weather and high humidity. He sank seven birdies and no bogeys in shooting a 64 for a 130 total.

Nicklaus tied the tournament record for 18 holes, set in 1965 by R.H. Sikes, and broke the 36-hole mark of 132 established in 1973 by Jim Barber.

Jim Nelford of Burnaby, B.C., shot a 70 Friday for a 137 total, seven shots off the pace, and Dave Barr of Kelowna, B.C., made the cut for the final two rounds with a 72 for a 142 total.

Concerning the final two rounds, Nicklaus said: "I would say the scoring record (at Whitemarsh) is in danger if the weather holds up."

He was referring to the winning 17-under-par 271 by Hubert Green in 1974. Green, who led the first round by one shot over Nicklaus with a 65, slipped to a 73 Friday for 138, eight shots behind the leader.

"Obviously I played well," said Nicklaus. "I really putted well. And even the shots I missed I managed to recover for par."

And just as obviously, Nicklaus' thoughts that he might be physically and mentally drained from the British Open have been proven baseless.

There were two hole-in-ones in the second round, both on the 145-yard 16th hole. Schroeder scored an ace with a six iron and Jim Mason did it with a seven. Mason shot a second round 67, but didn't make the cut at 142 because of an opening 78.

AL Stars Rally; Down Triangle

American League players refused to let a troublesome start get them down and their tenacity paid off with survival in the Greater Victoria Little League baseball playoffs at Lambrick Park.

Jolted Friday night when Triangle broke out of the gate with four runs in the top half of the first inning, Americans battled back to reduce the deficit to 4-3 after three innings. Then came a six-run explosion in the fourth and American went on for a 9-5 triumph.

Striking out seven batters in a route-going effort, winning-pitcher Mike Stein yielded five hits and contributed a double to the American attack. Gerry Brister slashed two hits in three trips to the plate for Triangle, now out of the double-loss-elimination tourney.

Sidney and Layritz were scheduled to clash in a losers' bracket game this afternoon before Gordon Head and Lakehill clashed at 6:30 in the winners' bracket final.

Vistas Home To Reserves

Vancouver Island Vistas and Vancouver Whitecaps Reserves will again attempt to settle a question of superiority Monday night at Royal Athletic Park in a Pacific Northwest Soccer League match scheduled for Sunday at Burnaby and switched to Victoria because Swangard Stadium is not available.

Haslam Smith Duel

LANGLEY — Victoria drivers Roy Haslam and Roy Smith waged one of the more exciting duels in International Drivers Challenge Series meet for open super-stock cars here Friday.

Unfortunately, for them, the battle was for third place and Haslam finally grabbed that spot when he passed Smith on the 72nd lap of the 75-lap main event.

Out in front was Don Dowdy, the NASCAR champion from Tacoma who held on for his first victory in the IDC series after getting by early-leader Tony Musfelt of Victoria on the 22nd lap.

IDC points leader Ron Eaton of Tacoma finished second as Musfelt slipped back to ninth. George Stuart of Campbell River, involved in a crash during the trophy dash, was forced to drop out with mechanical problems.

Jack Cooper, Tacoma, took the 'B' main, John Rothwell, New Westminster, won the 'A' trophy dash and Don Parnell, Anacortes, grabbed 'B' dash honors.

The six-meet IDC series resumes tonight at Skagit Valley and winds up Sunday in Monroe, Wash., at Evergreen Speedway.

Games Sales $4 Million

EDMONTON (CP) — About $4 million worth of Commonwealth Games tickets had been sold by Thursday and officials hope the final sales figure will be about $4.7 million.

Jim McGregor, tickets and accommodation coordinator for the Games Foundation, said that 100,000 tickets remain unsold.

He said officials still were hoping to sell all tickets and that would be the first time since the 1936 Olympics that an international sporting event sold all tickets.

Barry Should Buy

Barry Wilkin should have been setting up treats for his fielders Friday after pitching Seaboard Construction to a 4-0 Stuffy McGinnis Softball League victory over Ingraham Hotel at Central Park.

With his mates turning in an errorless performance in the field, Wilkin was able to escape trouble in four of the seven innings. The hotel crew, touching Wilkin for five hits and getting another two men on base with walks, couldn't find a flaw in the Seaboard defence the four times runners were in scoring position.

Included among the defensive gems was a throw from centrefielder Glen Kilduf that nipped losing-pitcher Lorne Bowden at the plate as he attempted to score on a fifth-inning single by Barry McLachlan.

In the Heywood Avenue League, Remco Office Systems erupted for eight runs in the fifth inning after being held without a hit over the first four frames by pitcher Larry Hall of Taylor House Movers.

Ray Riddell launched the assault with two-run, one-out triple and winning-pitcher Bob Richdale contributed a home run in the uprising that enabled Remco to subdue the Movers 8-5.

Colwood Vets Charge to Top

Royal Colwood charged into first place Friday in the Vancouver Island Seniors' Golf League with a near-sweep of the points in a match against Gorge Vale.

The Colwood veterans trimmed their rivals 5½-½ to jump one point ahead of former-leader Uplands, which was thumped 4-2 by Victoria Golf Club in a contest switched to the Oak Bay links because of the B.C. Amateur tournament at Uplands.

Glen Meadows moved within four points of the second-place Uplands crew with a 5-1 romp at Cedar Hill.

Howland Smith, Brian Whitlow and Jake Peters each scored individual victories for Victoria, which added a triumph in one of the two four-ball contests to produce the 4-2 margin against Uplands and open the gates for the Colwood charge to the top.

Two City Rowers Reach U.S. Finals

COLLINGSWOOD, N.J. — Victoria oarsmen John Alexander and Patrick Walters will be bidding for United States titles today and Sunday on the Cooper River in finals of the 102nd annual national rowing championships.

Members of the Victoria City Rowing Club, Walters and Alexander won their race in elimination heats Friday and advanced into the final for the elite doubles crown.

Alexander also moved through to finals of the elite open dash and the elite lightweight singles. Walters also earned a place in the final of the elite open singles.

Among their opponents in the title races will be Olympian Bill Dietz, the many-time American singles champion who qualified for finals in the quarter-mile elite open dash and the elite doubles. Dietz is competing with the New York Athletic, which is defending the team title.

By The Associated Press

If you're going to lose, you may as well do it right.

"It's better that we got beat 9-0 than 1-0," Boston manager Don Zimmer shrugged after Kansas City Royals, led by rookie Clint Hurdle's six runs batted in and Paul Splittorff's six-hitter, routed the Red Sox and handed them their first shutout since last September, 108 games ago.

The result trimmed Boston's American League East lead to seven games over Milwaukee Brewers, while the Royals opened a 1½-game lead over California in the West.

In the rest of the American League, Oakland A's beat Toronto 7-2 before the Blue Jays earned a split with a 5-4 victory, Cleveland Indians clobbered Seattle Mariners 11-0, Milwaukee shaded Texas Rangers 4-3, California Angels split with Detroit Tigers, winning 4-2 in 11 innings and losing 5-0, New York Yankees topped Chicago White Sox 7-4 and Baltimore Orioles nosed out Minnesota Twins 5-4 in 10 innings.

In National League action, Chicago Cubs edged San Diego Padres 5-4, Cincinnati Reds downed Montreal Expos 10-3, Pittsburgh Pirates beat San Francisco Giants 3-0, Los Angeles Dodgers stopped St. Louis Cardinals 7-5, Philadelphia Phillies beat Houston Astros twice, 6-1 and 8-2, and New York Mets routed Atlanta Braves 12-3.

Pete Rose extended the major leagues' longest hitting streak of the season to 34 games with a first-inning single. He now is three away from tying the National League record of 37 by Tommy Holmes, who set itwith the old Boston Braves in 1945.

Manager Herman Franks of Chicago Cubs is doing everything he can to give his ace relief pitcher, Bruce Sutter, a day off.

But no matter how hard he tries, Franks has had to to turn to Sutter to help Chicago preserve a victory.

"If my arm feels good and if I don't have any pain, I'm ready to pitch even though I might be a little tired," Sutter said Friday night after protecting the Cubs 5-4 National League baseball victory over San Diego Padres.

In preserving the win, Sutter notched his 17th save of the season, just three behind Padres reliever Rollie Fingers' major league-leading total of 20.

Carnarvon Wins Opener

Capilano of North Vancouver and Victoria Carnarvon tangled this afternoon for a berth in Sunday's final of the Zone III Pony League baseball playoff, a four-team, double-loss-elimination competition at Carnarvon Park.

Carnarvon made an impressive start in Friday's opening round by trimming Powell River 5-1 as Marty Hall pitched a three-hitter and Clark Austin staged a batting show that produced three hits, including a home run.

Capilano got five-hit pitching from Brendon McCabe and two hits from Chuck Law on the way to a 4-1 triumph over West Vancouver. Powell River and West Vancouver were scheduled to meet at noon today, with the winner to play (at 6 p.m.) the loser of a 3 p.m. contest between Carnarvon and Capilano.

Check Those Times And Read That 'Form'

By BILL WALKER
Times Staff

Students of form would do well to check the running times of races at Sandown Raceway if they seek to enjoy a profitable day at the track.

Because, as the standardbred season passed the halfway mark today, times were getting quicker and past form was being reflected more and more in the results.

Take the featured eighth on Friday, for example.

Holridge Duke, a five-year old chestnut gelding owned and driven by Hans Ericsson of Cloverdale was a handy winner. But the odd part was that Holridge Duke got away at 4-1 odds. Three times previously at Sandown Holridge Duke had been timed in 2:05 and change, possibly boasted the best speed rating in the field, and been a winner of two.

Yes, the second-place finisher, Excel B Mac, had had one faster time, 2:04 4/5 but Holridge Duke was running out of the one hole and that figured to give him the edge, which it did.

Holridge Duke paid $10.80 while the exactor, with Excel B Mac in second place, was a surprising $41.80.

Speaking of speed, the final five races on the card were all run under 2:08 with Brown Flare in the ninth being the most glaring overlay of the night.

Dropping in class, Brown Flare went off at 13-1, won easily in the good time of 2:05 3/5, and returned $28.70. The pace was prompted by the track record holder, Gingers Dustie (2:04), who finished second and that exactor was worth $55.10 and these were two horses which figured.

Otherwise Joe Hudon led the drivers with two winners, Spindrift Two ($6.40) in the seventh and Andy's Wayne ($20.50) in the sixth. Andys Wayne combined with Senga Nola for an exactor of $119.40, the best of the warm evening.

A new owner is Ken McCausland of Duncan who recently purchased three horses, Shady Hill Sam, Woodys Kat and Nechako Kate from Mac Galbraith. Miles Armstrong will drive.

Attendance was 1,391 and he mutuel handle $80,306.

Total mutuel handle to date is $2,132,321, for a per-race average of $8,100. There has been a 30 per cent jump in attendance and the mutuel play during the past two weeks for which general manager Jim Keeling Jr. is pleased.

"We naturally are happy with the increase," he said. "Now it's all downhill from here", he added as the meeting goes into its second half.

Kelso to Coach UBC Swim Squad

VANCOUVER (CP) — Jack Kelso, a medallist for Canada in the 1962 Commonwealth Games, has been named head swim coach at the University of British Columbia, becoming UBC's first full-time swim coach since the retirement in 1975 of Jack Pomfret.

Kelso, a native of Ireland who settled at Ocean Falls in 1952, won two silver and two bronze medals for Canada at Perth, Australia, in 1962.

Kelso, 38, spent the last 12 years coaching and teaching in the United States, Jamaica, Pakistan and Japan. His last position was at the Canadian Academy in Kobe, Japan.

Lancaster Ducks Drill

REGINA (CP) — Veteran quarterback Ron Lancaster failed to show for practice Thursday in the wake of Saskatchewan Roughriders' shocking 27-23 loss to Hamilton Tiger-Cats in a Canadian Football League game Wednesday.

Also missing from the Roughriders' practice were linebacker Lou Clare, tight end Bob Richardson and defensive end Bill Baker.

Coach Jim Eddy, who had replaced Lancaster with rookie quarterback Larry Dick at the start of the third quarter Wednesday with Saskatchewan leading 20-3, said Lancaster "had some things to do" Thursday.

Eddy said the three others missing practice had permission to stay in Hamilton for another day.

Lancaster has declined comment on Eddy's controversial coaching decision Wednesday. Lancaster was ordered back into the game for the fourth quarter but was unable to overcome Hamilton's momentum.

Meanwhile, three Toronto Argonauts have been fined $100 each—double the usual fine for expulsion from a game—after flareups in Tuesday's game at Montreal.

The Alouettes defeated Toronto 30-23.

Wayne Smith and Larry Brame were disqualified for throwing punches in a mixup late in the contest while Doug MacIver earned his expulsion for throwing punches after the game was over.

CFL commissioner Jake Gaudaur, who levied the fines, said there was no significance in the amount of the fines other than "on reflection" feeling the automatic $60 fine that has been in effect for several years didn't go far enough.

AROUND THE GALLERIES

Two 1978 graduates of the University of Victoria visual arts department are among five winners of the first Helen Pitt Graduate Awards Exhibition, held last month in Vancouver. They are Jeannette C. Bonneau and Teresa A. Payne, who will each receive $3,000 from a total of $15,000 set aside for the competition.

The other three winners are Neil Berecry, from the Emily Carr College of Art, and Wendy Hamlin and Anna Kirman from the University of B.C.

The five winners were chosen after the works of 15 finalists were selected for exhibit at the Vancouver Art Gallery by a panel of three judges. Among the finalists were three more graduating students from UVic — Elizabeth Conway, Malcolm Wright, Robert Youds and Kerry Noble.

Bonneau, 30, was born on the Penticton Indian Reservation and is a member of the Okanagan tribe Interior Salish. The award-winning works which she submitted to the exhibition were four welded metal sculptures. Payne, 26, was born in Vegreville, Alta. Her winning entries were works in pastel.

The new exhibition-competition was made possible through a bequest from Helen Pitt, who died in Vernon in 1976. The bequest is being administered by the Vancouver Foundation, which organized the exhibition in cooperation with Vancouver Art Gallery. The adjudicator was Vera Frenkel of the Department of Visual Arts of York University.

At the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, 1040 Moss, an exhibition and sale of the wildflower watercolors of Wendy Gibbs opened this week. She is one of those rare painters of wildflowers who combine exquisite technique with rigorous botanical accuracy.

Born and educated in London, England, she came to Canada in 1972 after painting the indigenous flora of Nigeria and the west coast of the United States. In 1977 she was awarded a scholarship from the Canadian Nature Federation to produce a folio of wildflower watercolors and it is mainly from that folio that the 39 works on exhibit have been taken.

The exhibition will remain on view through Sept. 4.

A collection of ceramic sculpture by North Vancouver potter Ron Tribe is featured as the centre of an array of B.C. pottery and sculpture at the Maples Gallery, at the corner of West Saanich and Keating's Cross Road.

At times a functional purpose is the start for one of Tribe's sculptures, but even the high, square-sided "vases" bear a philosophical value, and the fact that pieces often have titles suggests that their main use is to please the imagination. In slab-built wall plaques and low, sail-like pieces, Tribe carries further his interests in minimal landscape and economical color decoration.

Tribe can also decorate a simple beaker with a crystalline glaze of astonishing transparency and subtlety and construct a teapot that is at once too gorgeous to use and so perfectly balanced that it does not waver on its bamboo-wrapped handle during its pouring arc.

Tribe's works will remain on view and on sale through Aug. 6.

Oils, acrylics, still life, seascapes, marine abstracts and loal scenes by Elvera Frame are on view, Monday through Aug. 4 at the Emily Carr Arts Centre, 207 Government.

Of special interest to tourists and others is the display at the centre of turn-of-the-century gowns. This has been set up by the Canadianna Costume Society of B.C. and Western Canada. It is changed each month. Hours for viewing both exhibitions are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Concerts Thrill City Audiences

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Any member of Victoria's music-loving public who is not making a point of attending at least some of the 28 concerts in the Victoria International Festival series is depriving themselves of a rare pleasure. What has been heard so far is not only the best to be had of the summer season, but the most exhilerating musical experience of the entire year.

A performance this week that thrilled its McPherson Playhouse audience was an unforgettable demonstration of the calibre of these fine concerts.

One of the soloists was an artist regarded by leading critics in major centres as the greatest clarinetist now appearing before the public. Gervase de Peyer has appeared at most of the major music festivals held around the world. He comes to the Victoria Festival and the Shawnigan Summer School from his home in England where he is also celebrated as a conductor.

This week, with Canadian pianist William Aide assisting him brilliantly, he performed the Poulenc Sonata, a work of extraordinary beauty, excitement and invention. Peyer's performance was nothing less than sensational in all its technical aspects and incomparable artistry.

He commands a wonderful variety of tonal textures, passing through all transitions of coloring and registration effortlessly and with a musical discernment and taste that is impeccable.

Great as this performance was, it was not the only thrill of the evening. The lovely American pianist, Robin McCabe, playing the long, difficult and exquisite Miroirs by Ravel, provided a superb interpretation, eloquent in its explorations of the many subtle moods and rhythms of the work; an interpretation that as tenderly explored its poetic depths as, with confidence and breathing fire, it rendered electrifying passages of virtuosity.

The final section of the program was devoted to the Mendelssohn Trio in D minor, given a sparkling, heady performance by this city's fine resident professional ensemble, Trio Victoria.

The Trio, which consists of Robin Wood, piano, Sydney Humphreys, violin, and James Hunter, cello, is heard fairly regularly throughout the winter season, but on this auspicious occasion the group excelled itself, playing with verve and passion, displaying a lovely warm tone, endearing lyricism in the lovely Andante section and with technical excellence and precision in the exciting finale.

Thursday at St.Michael's University School auditorium the featured artists were violinist Yuri Mazurkevich, closely partnered at the piano by William Aide in the Brahms Sonata No. 1 in G minor, the two performing with outstanding mastery and insight, a richly constructed and difficult work.

This concert was devoted to Brahms and also featured Hokuro Mori, cellist, with pianist Robin McCabe displaying his deep velvet tone and superb technique in the Sonata Op. 38, while de Peyer joined the Philadelphia String Quartet for the Clarinet Quintet Op. 115, a performance which inevitably proved to be chamber music at its absolute best.

Symphony Festival Under Way

Victoria Symphony's much debated summer festival concerts have been under way since July 9 at two locations. Weekday concerts take place in Heritage Court, adjacent to the Provincial Museum, at noon, on Thursdays and Fridays. Saturdays and Sunday, Aug. 6, Beacon Hill Park's Cameron Bandshell provides the setting and these concerts begin at 2:30 p.m.

There will be one Monday concert this season — on Aug. 7, B.C.'s holiday. This is a special concert at Beacon Hill which will commence at 5 p.m. and will be attended in part by Prince Phillip and Prince Andrew, who will be visiting Victoria that day.

There are three other specials; two will take place at Christ Church Cathedral at 2:30 p.m.on Sundays July 23 and Aug. 13, and these will be conducted by George Corwin of the University of Victoria music faculty. There will also be a concert at Parkland Secondary School at Sidney on July 30 at 8 p.m.conducted by Glen Fast, who will be conducting the other July concerts. Edgar Hemingway is to conduct the August series.

Light or familiar classics and Broadway music is being featured at all concerts and principals from the orchestra and other Victoria artists will be appearing in solo roles. Soprano Karen Smith and principal horn Joan Watson have performed so far and others to be heard include concert mistress Derry Deane, first desk violinist Sue Eddlemon and principal cellist Larry Skaggs.

All concerts are free to the public.

The Prodigy Becomes an Artist

RUGGIERO RICCI . . . eighth summer here

It was a time of prodigies. Menuhin had blossomed early and taken the musical world by storm and suddenly there was a spate of eager parents and equally eager teachers pushing their precociously gifted young into what they hoped would be a world spotlight.

Most of these early blossomings had not strong enough roots or were basically well enough nourished to sustain life, so the flowering faded quickly and was not renewed.

But in 1918 there was born in San Francisco at the Presidio army base, to a bandsman and his wife, a son who was named Roger to go with his Italian father's Americanized surname of Rich. The exceptional musical gifts of this son, nurtured in a large family where, as he puts it, musical mania reigned, were to turn him into a prodigy at the age of 10 and make his name — restored to its Italian form — one among the top echelon of international violinists: Ruggiero Ricci.

Ricci (the name is pronounced Roo-jeer-o Richy), is for the eighth successive year spending six weeks on Vancouver Island as a member of the faculty of the Shawnigan Summer School of the Arts and as a performing artist in the Victoria International Festival.

Survival from the status of prodigy into mature artist was not accomplished easily, Ricci says. In fact his teen years were made miserable by being constantly tugged this way and that. Advice and arguments over his present and future became a sort of persecution, everybody having different ideas as to whom he should be studying with, what repertoire, what public appearances he should take on. "It was rough."

He went on playing and working in New York until he enlisted in the army in the Second World War and was a member of an air force propaganda unit which involved more playing. After the war he started performing in Europe and was the first artist, at the age of 27, to play a solo (unaccompanied) violin recital in New York.

The years up to now have been filled with concert work, teaching, and recording sessions that have resulted in more than 500 records, including the first complete recording ever to be made of Paganini's 24 Caprices.

But it is here in Victoria, this summer, that Ricci will perform his anniversary concert, marking 50 years on the concert stages of the world. The concert is scheduled for Sunday, July 30, at McPherson Playhouse. Ricci will be assisted by Robin McCabe at the piano and by fellow string players from the faculty in a performance of Vivaldi's The Seasons. Ricci will take the solo part as well as conducting the work and will also play a sonata by Rossini and some Paganini.

The Columbia Broadcasting System has begun to make a documentary profile of the career of Ricci. Some of it has been shot in London and at the end of the month the crew will come to Victoria to make tapes of the violinist teaching and supervising practice with Summer School students at St. Michael's and performing in the Festival concerts.

In a conversation with Ricci you are quickly aware of his rugged individualism, his uncompromising honesty and his no-nonsense brand of musical professionalism. He makes no secret, for instance, of the fact that he was supposed to be eight years old when he made his debut in New York, but was in reality 10. The younger you were, or appeared to be, the more of a sensation you created — "Actually I didn't look more than six; I was always small."

In his 50 performing years around the world, Ricci has seen more changes in the life-style of the concert artist than occurred in the last 150. Jet travel, television and transformations in the recording industry have greatly affected all performers.

"Music has become big business. You have to know how to promote a career. You no longer sit at home practising and waiting for your agent to set up a round of recital dates," he says.

Artists spending part of every year on tour used to accumulate not merely hours, but weeks of travelling time alone. Today you can wing your way around the world, appearing with a dozen orchestras in less time than once was needed for a North American tour.

And then there is television. Ricci points out that if you were to play every night of the year to 3,000 people each night, you would not have reached as big an audience as is possible with one television appearance.

Ricci says that today's audiences are more demanding. "The technical standard of modern concert violinists is away up — far above what used to be acceptable. In the twenties, violinists — Kreisler for example — used to play their own music at recitals and mostly standard pieces; very nice but not particularly challenging.

"Programming has changed radically since then. Audience taste is much improved. Artists don't play nearly as many recitals because, for one thing, there are a great many more good orchestras all over this continent and abroad. So you play concertos. Unfortunately that means that the great recital repertoire is neglected ... but people want big sound now, big effects, lots of color. Much of that is the result of the TV impact."

Ricci himself does something over 100 performances a year and maybe 20 of these, he says, are recitals.

Strangely, although Ricci says it is more difficult today to make a place for oneself as a concert violinist of stature, the standard at competitions he finds lapsed in recent years.

"At a recent competition I attended," he says, "the first prize winner wouldn't have gotten better than 10th prize a few years ago."

He thinks the best teaching today comes out of the United States and Russia. In the States, he says, the mixture is good; the best of the best schools of thought in violin teaching. He himself is on the faculty of New York's famed Juilliard School.

At the Shawnigan School (remember it's located in Victoria on the St. Michael's University School campus on Richmond Road) besides master classes, Ricci also organizes practice sessions and supervises them on an individual basis.

"I might spend the whole six weeks working with a student on a particular problem," he comments. "Like intonation — especially intonation. A student could have a quite amazing technique and still suffer from an impure intonation.

What would he say was the elusive quality that lifts one student out of the ranks of others technically their equal, to become a noted artist? He ponders only momentarily and then says, "Temperament. A quality that puts something special into the music ... a quality that is linked to personal magnetism. You see it in politics and in many other walks of life."

LASERS CLEAR FOG

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Lasers may be used in the future to clear fog away from airports in some localities, says the inventor of the device.

"I've done some calculations on using laser to clear fog away from airports," Dr. Charles H. Townes said in an interview during a visit to Memorial University of Newfoundland.

"Fog stops laser, but it also absorbs laser and the fog dissipates by being heated."

Townes, who received a Nobel Prize for his development of the laser, an acronym for Light Amplification by Simulated Emission of Radiation, now works in California in astrophysics.

He said the role of laser as a potential weapon is "very much overplayed."

"Laser can be used as a weapon but not very effectively. It's a very expensive way of hurting people."

Townes said research now is being conducted into the possibility of using lasers to produce fuson energy.

Water or What Cut Mars Channels?

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — The newly discovered riverbeds on Mars may have been formed by rivers such as no human has ever seen, a Caltech scientist has calculated.

The deep channels photographed by the Viking orbiters were not carved by water but by heavy hydrocarbons that formed liquids from gases in the Martian atmosphere, said Dr. Y.L. Yung, an assistant professor of planetary sciences.

The theory that the channels — some deeper than the Grand Canyon — are dry riverbeds, formed by water in the formative eras of Mar's development, was widely discussed during the early months of the Viking probe.

The channels "unquestionably" show some type of liquid once flowed across areas of Mars, he said in an interview.

"But what evidence do we have that it was water?" he asked.

"There's quite a bit of water on the planet, but it is too cold and the water is in the form of ice. It is about 100 degrees colder on Mars than on Earth."

Yung, who first proposed his theory in an article for Nature magazine, pointed out the ice could not have flowed in rivers unless Mars was much warmer millions of years ago.

"But if it was that much warmer, there you run into trouble, because if Mars was that much warmer, the Earth (which is closer to the sun) would have been too hot for the evolution that ocurred.

"This is the basic problem. There's a conflict. We can't say, 'OK, fine, maybe the sun was warmer in the past,' because the Earth would have been boiling."

The Viking probes showed the Martian atmosphere has 2 percent nitrogen, and nitrogen has two isotopes, one heavy and one light. The nitrogen on Mars is heavier than on Earth, and that, he said, must show the lighter nitrogen escaped into space.

"Therefore," he said, "there is reason to believe that one time the atmosphere of Mars was very much different than it is t day and, in particular, there was a lot more hydrogen.

"Now we find a great deal of carbon dioxide. But at one time in the past, with a lot of hydrogen and all the carbon there would have been a lot of methane," an unstable gas that would have been affected by sunlight, he said, turning into "something like propane and ethanz and other compounds, essentially the hydrocarbons."

Finally the carbon atoms would have to start sharing the hydrogen and "start making the heavy stuff such as hexane and xanthene" liquids.

"And these would acount for some of the changes."

He's Hawaii Condominium Connection

ON THE GO

With Jerry Hulse

You've heard of the French Connection, right?

Well, now we bring you the Condominium Connection.

The subject is vacations, the destination is Hawaii and the "pusher" is Steve Irwin of Encino, Calif., who went off on a vacation and turned up a business.

Wow, did he turn up a business!

How would you like to work your way through 118 condominium complexes with thousands of units on four islands instead of working up a tan on Waikiki or Kaanapali Beach?

WELL, THAT'S exactly what Irwin did when he found himself hooked by the Condominium Connection, the name he has given to his new business.

Arriving in Hawaii a while back he got curious. Why wasn't there a central agency to represent all condominium owners, he asked?

It's when he, Steve Irwin, decided to become a condominium pusher. Just like that, poof, a new challenge for the former aerospace engineer who'd been dabbling in real estate back in the San Fernando Valley of Los Angeles.

RETURNING to the mainland, he composed a catalogue. A huge, fat catalogue that contains descriptions of hundreds of condominiums — big, small and in-between — on Oahu, Kauai, Maui, Molokai and the Big Island.

Some are small, mama-papa operations. Lots of informal atmosphere: So you forgot to bring along a toaster? Stop worrying, the manager will find you one. What's more, if cards are your game, he may even ask you to join his bridge group. So who cares if he has to shut the telephone off for a while? Relax. This is Hawaii.

THE SMALLER the condominium complex, the more folksy the management. Frequently they put the torch to a barbecue on Sunday night. Sometimes they even host a luau.

The bigger operations come nearer to being hotels, with tennis courts, restaurants, daily maid service. One complex on Maui even provides transportation to town to enable tenants to shop for groceries. Another offers a car with every rental. Others charge nothing for the seventh night if the guest signs up for a week. In several cases there's a flat 10 per cent discount for longer stays.

IRWIN FIGURES if you live in downtown Los Angeles or any other big city you're probably looking for something peaceful. Someplace that's casual and uncomplicated. So he recommends the mama-papa operations.

On the other hand, if the vacationers are from Twin Falls they'll probably want to be where the action is. In this case, that would be Oahu, Irwin says. Over on the Waikiki strip in one of those high-rise affairs with a view of Diamond Head.

ORIGINALLY Irwin rented a condominium himself. This was on Kauai with his wife Elinor, their three children and his mother-in-law. What he described as a townhouse cost him $65 a day. With a kitchen, the Irwins provided their own meals and picnic lunches.

"It was the cheapest vacation we ever had," says Irwin.

When the vacation was over, his wife, mother-in-law and the kids split for home — and he went to work.

He went island hopping, getting a fix on hundreds of condominium rentals.

HE NEARLY drove himself crackers, insisting on visiting every last complex on each of the islands. With a photographer, he put in 14-hour days.

Finally Irwin came home, bringing with him bundles of pictures and pages of notes.

They're all in his catalogue.

Mostly, Irwin deals with travel agents. "A lot of them are excellent but many know little about the condo game," he says.

BESIDES FILLING them in on condominium details, he sells them catalogues so they can make their own bookings.

It was on the island of Maui, Irwin says, that he discovered "the best buy of the lot — a unit facing the ocean (large enough for two couples) for $173 a week."

To old island hands it will come as no surprise that Maui with more than 6,000 units, is the condominium capital of Hawaii. The count on other islands is between 1,200 and 1,500 units each.

SOME condominium renters provide ice makers, color television sets, lawn furniture, hibachis, ice buckets, ice crushers, hot pads, wet mops, dish towels, bamboo baskets, milk stools, ad infinitum.

Besides assisting travel agents, Irwin accepts bookings himself. (Write to the Condominium Connection, 16400 Ventura Blvd., Suite 215, Encino, California 91436, or telephone (213) 995-6055. Reservations are by mail or telephone only.)

TO KEEP expenses down, Irwin suggests that guests take along certain groceries that are either high-priced or hard to find in Hawaii: nuts, raisins, powdered cereal, powdered milk, instant potato envelopes, tuna, sardines, tea bags, instant coffee, sugar, sweetener, packaged soups. Even caviar.

Irwin's catalogue contains pictures and floor plans of the various units, with details concerning telephones, maid service, washer-dryers, swimming pools, sun decks and what have you.

DESCRIBING one Big Island unit, Irwin provides the following vitals: two bedroom, two bath — $50 daily, $300 weekly, $800 monthly.

Another on Kauai: two bedroom, two bath — $55 daily (to 13 days) $50 daily (14-29 days), $45 daily (30 days and over). Maximum four-persons.

And on Maui: two bedroom, two bath — $45 daily, $1,215 monthly.

And so it goes, with details on studios ($22 a day) to luxurious three-bedroom pads.

CLAYOQUOT LODGE
AN ISLAND HIDEAWAY

Wickaninnish Inn has been closed to make way for National Park Development. We are aware of a delightful alternative. Clayoquot Lodge is a unique island hideaway near Long Beach.

An historic, ruggedly sophisticated lodge constructed in 1905, Clayoquot is the perfect place for "getting away from it all."

Attractive rooms or housekeeping cottages — PRIVATE 140 acre island — sand dunes & beaches — rain forest — crabs, clams, oysters, salmon — licensed fireside lounge (featuring Westcoast sea food). All this and peace & quiet too! For information & free brochure and reservations: (112) 725-3284, P.O. Box 188, Tofino, B.C. 7-22x

ALASKA

The cruise is for 7 days (7 nights). All meals included. Private shower and toilet. On board entertainment. Casino. Optional shore excursions at moderate prices. Prices based on double occupancy.

Calm cruising and spectacular rugged scenery. Thousands of years of glacial activity has carved out this untouched uniquely beautiful part of the world.

Your Alaskan summer means long daylight hours, surprisingly warm. Cruise starts in Vancouver and meanders northward thru the thousand miles of islands and inlets called the Inside Passage. Waterfalls, glaciers and breathtaking coastline. Visit Ketchikan, salmon centre of the world.

Juneau, capital of Alaska, originally a gold rush town. Around Glacier Bay. Ice walls 250 feet high continually on the move. Binoculars and camera imperative. Then Wrangell (British, Russian, American-the U.S. bought Alaska from the Russians for about two cents an acre). Established by fur traders, today unspoiled and quaint. Come see Strand's Alaska.

'Hippety hop' to Iceland

Life sparkles under midnight sun

Travel Tips

By STAN DELAPLANE

Iceland's summer nightlife goes on under a sun that was still in the sky when we checked it at a quarter to midnight. Guide books say there are two hours of "night" between sunset and sunrise. But it's a kind of mild twilight.

Reykjavik (pop. 90,000) is not a stay-awake town. People simply go to bed in daylight. Tourist information lists two discotheques. Entertainment at five leading hotels.

There's one TV channel. Operates only from 7 to 11 p.m. Off the air each Thursday and all of July when the staff takes a vacation.

We flew over on Icelandic.

Known to the shaggy guitar set as the "hippety hop" airline since they discovered its cut-rates. (Icelandic doesn't belong to IATA, the association that fixes fares on all major airlines.)

The lines flies from Chicago and New York terminating in Luxembourg with a clutch of fares. Best on the list is APEX fare: $375 from Chicago and $345 from New York, round trip. Payment 30 days in advance. You must stay over 14 days and not more than 45.

They list a "bargain fare" for standby. But it's actually $5 more than the APEX.

The under-30 kids might do better on some charter flights. But they seem fiercely loyal to Icelandic. Our DC-8 was full of them. No empty seats going or coming.

Food is good. Cocktails $1. No movie. No frills. One class airplane, three abreast both sides. Not much leg room. Flight from Chicago to Luxembourg, 10 hours, gets a little cramping.

Iceland is anxious to improve tourist business so the airline sandwiched a handful of American journalists among the shaggies and guitars.

The tourist board offers 24, 48 or 72 hour stopovers at a reasonable price: Three days at first-class hotels. Breakfast. Some lunches. A lot of sightseeing. Total $122 each person.

Reykjavik is an attractive, modern city. Since Iceland sits over unlimited hot springs and geysers, the city is completely heated by underground water piped everywhere at 194 degrees.

An Icelander told us: "Where the pipes run, in the winter they melt the snow and these give the children paths to walk to school."

Prices are about equal to North American cities.

Our Hotel Loftleider lists rooms at $54 a day double, $37 single. Hotel City goes at $35 double, $21 single.

At the hotel bar, gin and tonic is $2.50. Two Irish coffees, cost $7.50. And after dinner coffee went on the bill at $1.25.

Now for the good news: There is no tipping in Iceland.

Woman reporter got a wash and set for $8. Girl refused the offered tip of a dollar.

"There's lots of rain," the tourist board warned us. "But it never gets cold."

They must have been talking of a different time. During our three days there was no rain. "You are lucky," said the tour guide woman. (She also refused a tip.)

But on the country trip we all shivered outside the bus. Baby, it was cold outside! A temperature chart shows July average at 10 degrees.

Save money at the airport duty free store: They let you buy coming into the country as well as going out. Scotch or gin is $3.75 a fifth. American cigarettes, $4.50 a carton.

The countryside is full of long-haired sheep which produce wool sweaters sold at all tourist shops. Icelanders say the wool has a special quality of warmth and lightness the sheep have developed over many generations in Iceland's winters.

All farms have lots of shaggie toy ponies. Icelanders are very proud of them and owners can recite their pedigrees. You can hire them for pony trekking across country.

Eurailpass magic word travelling around Europe

By GUS STEVENS

It is 11 minutes from the Frankfurt airport to the downtown railroad station by a train that glides along as quietly and smoothly as a knife through butter, which our little group appreciates as it struggles with jet lag.

Frankfurt is an elegant, wealthy, antiseptic city, the money centre of West Germany. They continually build subways and commercial towers. The shops are new, fancy and expensive.

A gun shop informs its customers that certain kinds of pistols may be purchased without licenses. They remember Elvis with special recordings of his 40 biggest hits. (It comes out in German as Elvis' 40 grossest hits.)

We board an intercity train (one that does not leave the country) for the south. The train is operated by Deutsche Schlafwagen-und-Speiswagen-Gesellschaft (German Federal Railroad) and somebody said they had to lengthen the cars so the name would fit.

European railroads give names to their crack trains and this one is a beauty called Rheinpfeil. We zip through the green countryside at speeds approaching 200 kilometres per hour.

Munich, as spotless as a stainless steel brewing tank, is a beer-drinking, beer-producing city. There are six large breweries, the biggest being Lowenbrau.

The city is crisp and clean. There is prosperity everywhere, but because several large hotel chains built for the 1972 Olympics, many smaller and older hotels are going under.

The church bells clang all Sunday morning on the Marienplatz, but the churches do not seem crowded.

A tour guide shows visitors the old Messerschmidt aircraft plant and the building where they were supposed to head off the Second World War — Chamberlain came home waving a piece of paper and proclaiming "Peace in our time." Magazines now write articles about the Fuhrer: "Adolf Hitlers Weg Zur Macht." ("Rise to Power.")

At the Hofbrauhaus, heavy-lidded Germans brood over their mugs of beer as an oompah band plays traditional music. You cannot erase memories of putsches from your mind.

The tour bus passes an intersection where a sign points the way to Dachau, just outside of town, but the guide does not mention the place.

Swooping along the rails toward Innsbruck, gliding like a skater on glassy ice at more than 100 kilometers an hour. This is fast, but there are 200 kilometer-per-hour trains and, when they complete new roadbeds and equipment in France and Germany, there will be trains that will travel at 300 kilometers an hour.

The trains are hotels on wheels, big, clean, temperature controlled, roomy. One can sit at leisure in a compartment and make friends with those across the aisle, stroll the corridors, hang out the windows, haunt the lounge car or diner.

Some crack Trans Europ Express (TEE) trains, such as France's renowned Mistral, offer barber and beauty shop service, communications to anywhere in the world, secretarial service and the use of business machines.

The trains go everywhere on frequent schedules, so that it usually doesn't make much difference if you miss a departure. There will be another soon.

We are travelling by Eurailpass, which means the best first-class seats, simple reservations (when we bother with reservations at all), recognition by rail authorities as effective as a policeman's badge, and a bargain. On our city-to-city route we will travel for half the regular first-class fare.

Innsbruck is the Tyrol fairyland it always has been. The day is sparkling and warm, the night cool with the first hint of autumn. The river Inn rushes toward the Danube, carrying our good luck coins downstream.

We eat Austrian style beef (chunks on sticks with pieces of fruit) in an outdoor restaurant alongside the Inn. As it grows dark we watch the bats swoop over the river and lights twinkle from the restaurant at the top of the mountain which towers over the city.

Fortified by red wine, pear brandy and a good Austrian cigar, it is difficult to find fault with the Tyrol and its rivers which are slate grey from their glacial melt waters.

In Innsbruck's old town the covered Gothic walkways are mysterious and romantic. The famous Golden Roof, which sheltered royalty for generations, is still golden.

Kruger National Park zoo in reverse

Camp locks up tourists at night

By JOE HUGHES

SATARA, South Africa — I am a prisoner of Satara Camp. There appears to be no way of escape. The walls are high and patrols are heavy, and even if escape were possible, I doubt I could survive outside. Too many carnivorous animals.

My cell of sorts is more Sheraton than Sing Sing. There are the comforts of home . . . indoor plumbing, electricity, a small refrigerator, a soft bed, a Gideon Bible — all tightly compacted into a cute, round hut with a pointed, thatched roof.

ACUTALLY, I am a short-timer here at Satara. I will be released at dawn.

Before you jump to conclusions and fear I have run afoul of South Africa's apartheid laws, fear not.

Satara is not a prison in the true sense. It is one of 14 "rest" camps that dot the landscape in the 8,000-square-mile Kruger National Park, one of the world's great wild animal reserves and, perhaps, South Africa's most popular tourist attractions.

Close to one million tourists visited Kruger last year, 90 per cent of them coming from overseas.

SO MOST OF them had to hole up for the night or two at camps such as Satara, where the gates are closed and locked promptly at sunset and do not open again until sunrise.

There is a reason for all this. Kruger is, of course, not your run-of-the-mill zoo. It is a zoo in reverse. Here, they lock up the humans at night and let the animals run free — all one million animals in the park.

"It is the only way we can operate," says Kruger tour guide Graham Alexander. "Our visitors have to be off the roads and in one of the camps by sunset so we can be sure of their safety."

STRAGGLERS who want to catch a sunset glimpse of the park's lions, tigers, elephants, baboons, impalas, kudus, snakes, giraffes, birds, alligators, crocodiles and such are rounded up by special patrols.

The system seems to work well.

"We never have had a tourist lost or seriously injured here," says Alexander, "and we have been open 31 years."

The safety record of Kruger is amazing even considering "prisons" like Satara.

"OUTSIDE the rest camps, we rely on the honor system," says Alexander.

Sunrise is the best time to see Kruger, for that's when the animals are hungry and on the move, some of them using the same roads we do, looking for a meal, a watering hole or a bit of horseplay.

Elephants seem to like the asphalt roads more than others. As we round one bend in the road, a giant elephant straddles the white line. Since all animals have the right-of-way here, we gladly yield. Besides, he had a lot of "good buddies" off to one side.

KRUGER CAN be toured by car or bus, with guide or without, on your own or with a crowd. Car is the best mode because it allows you to do what you want, go where you want. Some park visitors will spend good portions of the day parked in one spot waiting for something to come bounding out of a bush. The wait usually isn't long.

"You really never know what you will find here from day to day," says Alexander. "The place is never the same twice, and I have gone weeks without sighting certain animals. Others, such as baboons, seem to be everywhere."

THERE ALSO is an advantage to travelling Kruger in a bus. The guides know how to manoeuver the buses into spots that are great for taking pictures. Binoculars and cameras are the only real equipment needed on this animal safari.

More than one million animals roam the Kruger landscape, and if you spend two or three days here — that's the average stay for a park visitor — you will see many of the 157,000 impalas, 14,000 zebras, 6,700 elephants, 5,000 hippos, 1,200 lions, 900 leopards, 23 species of snakes (13 poisonous), 458 species of birds . . . the list is long.

Not just another zoo, right?

THESE ANIMALS aren't captured-glory types. They make themselves at home in Kruger because Kruger is home. Their parents were, most probably, raised here; their grandparents and other relatives also grew up here.

"There are no animals imported to the park," says Alexander. "Everything you see lived here before there was a park."

Kruger is a cheap ticket once you spend the $1,200 to $2,000 for a round-trip airfare to South Africa from the United States. A family of four can spend two days and one night here for under $40; the price includes an overnight stay at a rest camp with all meals, park admission and tour guides. If you want to rent a car, the price is an extra $10 or so, and gasoline is $1.25 a gallon.

ONE-DAY admission to the park is $2 per person. Not everyone has to stay ovenight where the rooms are $6 to $10 for two people. But those not staying must be out of the park by sunset. Since the place is so large, this takes a bit of prior planning with a good map, a clock and some luck.

There's a lot more to Hawaii in the summer.
More savings.
More beautiful weather.
More comfort.

All the more reason to take a Hawaiian summer holiday on Western Airlines.

The savings: Fly Western to Hawaii from Vancouver and take advantage of our special money-saving airfares. We've got family fares, youth fares and, of course, special fares that apply when you buy a tour package.

The weather: Hawaii's climate, famous for being temperate year-round, is even more delightful in summer.
Temperatures and humidity are comfortably low.
There's little rain.
And you can always depend on plenty of sun for your beach fun, picnics, sightseeing, shopping and other outdoor activities.

The comfort: Western Airlines offers the only DC-10 Spaceships to Hawaii.
These roomy, wide-body planes offer extra comfort, even in Coach. And all seats are in pairs, so you're never more than one seat from an aisle.
There's also our fabulous Islander Service® that features delicious dining with choice of entrees in First Class and Coach. Plus complimentary refreshments.
For your entertainment, Western offers first-run movies and stereo between Vancouver and Hawaii (nominal charge in Coach).

Condo Vacations including tax and return airfare.
from $487 The way to go — with freedom, flexibility and privacy. It's like transporting your own home to Hawaii for your vacation. With all the comforts and amenities of home, plus beaches, pools, saunas, tennis courts, golf courses, you name it! Name your Island, too. Divide your stay between a condo on one, two, three, or even four Islands (ITWA-CIAM3).

One Week in Waikiki, One Week in Kauai or Hawaii including tax and return airfare.
from $590 Spend your first fabulous week at the beautiful Cinerama Reef Towers in Waikiki, where all the action is. Then for your second week, jet to your choice of either the Plantation Hale, set right in the middle of a magnificent coconut plantation, or the brand new Kona Bali Kai Condominium Hotel right on the water's edge on the Island of Hawaii (YV20-ITST545).

Two Weeks in Waikiki including tax and return airfare.
from $612 You'll spend your exciting Hawaiian vacation in the glittering resort and entertainment center of Honolulu on the Island of Oahu — the perfect vacation spot at the perfectly located Waikiki Surf Hotel. Everything you've ever dreamed of doing in Hawaii is yours for the asking, because you can walk to just about everything from Waikiki (ITWA-NHHW114).

Two weeks in Maui including tax and return airfare.
from $531 Price includes your stay at the lovely Kihei Kai Nani Hotel, transfers, hotel tax, porterage, lei greeting on arrival and services of our representative, who'll be on call for you every day. If you've never been to Maui, this is your chance to take in this breathtakingly beautiful Island for a very, very reasonable price (ITWA-WHT116).

All prices are per person, double occupancy. Airfares are special return fares on Western "Islander Flights" to Honolulu from Vancouver.

EXPERT LIVES HER LIFE BY THE ROBERTS RULE

EDMONTON (CP) — Roberts' Rules of Order is Cathy Clausen's bible.

Mrs. Clausen is one of two registered procedural parliamentarians in Canada. Cynthia Boodrum, another Edmonton resident, is the other.

People often misunderstand Mrs. Clausen's title.

"When someone asks me what I do and I say that I'm a parliamentarian, right away they ask me for what party and what are my political aspirations. I have none, absolutely none. In fact, I am most disinterested in politics.

"A registered procedural parliamentarian is, in actual fact, a rules chairman to help govern executive bodies and members of a number of different assemblies, anything from a community league to a city council."

In Alberta alone there were, at last count, 5,500 non-profit incorporated societies. Only a small percentage had adopted a parliamentary law reference.

"Because there is no guide adopted by these assemblies, chaos is really the rule rather than the exception."

'Doctor' Bridges Gap

SOUTH NEWBURY, Vt. (AP) — The patient was 112 years old and in traction, joints gnarled and twisted, frame sagging.

But the doctor, Milton Graton, said the Bedell Bridge is recovering.

Working with hand tools and aided by two assistants, Graton was restoring the 396-foot covered bridge that spans the Connecticut River between South Newbury and Haverhill, N.H.

Perched on a plank suspended alongside the wooden bridge, the 69-year-old bridge expert was relaxed as he performed the delicate surgery.

Obscured by beams and cribwork, Graton carried on his quiet work at one of the five remaining covered bridges over the Connecticut.

The Bedell, warped by time, buffeted by floods and crippled by neglect, was "in terrible sad shape when I got here," Graton said.

Much work remained. A new roof was being shingled and side boards were being replaced. Some 60 vertical posts that support the trusses were being fitted and damaged joints rebuilt.

If he believed in metal, the job might be easier. But for Graton, building bridges of steel is "like shooting a deer in the zoo — there's just no challenge to it."

"If the state folks have a job and want metal, they get someone else," he said, stroking the spruce posts at the Vermont entrance.

"This modern generation knows all about concrete and steel. When they see wood, they make a campfire out of it."

Graton sees the Bedell as the challenge of his life. "All the others got me ready for this one. I can't make a mistake."

Examples of his work can be found in Canada and Michigan. In all, he has restored 22 bridges in 20 years. Five others he built from scratch.

His knowledge grew out of a job moving bridges for the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. In the process, Graton began to make repairs.

Before long, he wanted to do more.'

His dusty pickup first bounced and rattled down the dirt road to the Bedell Bridge five years ago.

Each sunny day, a few townspeople from both sides of the river arrived at mid-morning to watch and wait. Graton stopped work to show them newly restored sections of the bridge he calls "the masterpiece."

NEW METHOD ENDS SMOKING FOR LIFE

RESEARCHED AT U.B.C.

Recently published results of research at U.B.C. report on a new, simple, pleasant way to end smoking permanently. Proven effective for even heavy smokers, smoking can be ended easily in just 24 hours without drugs, discomfort or weight gain. The new method now available in Victoria is called R.E.S.T. (Reduced Environmental Stimulation Technique). Private, personalized and professionally supervised, it can be used in your own home. 75% to 95% of the smokers who tried R.E.S.T. quit successfully. If you want to stop smoking, or if your doctor has told you to stop, phone now for free information or an appointment. Results are guaranteed.

Smokers who want to stop smoking for life can — Phone toll free, through Operator, Zenith 2280, Personal Improvement Centre, Monday to Friday, 8:30 to 5:00. P.I.C. 1177 W. Hastings.

Greenhouse Isn't A 'Hot House'

GARDENING

jack beastall

Three hundred years ago the word "greenhouse" was added to the gardener's vocabulary. It denoted "a house, mainly of glass, in which delicate and tender plants are reared and preserved."

Few amateur gardeners today are interested in rearing and preserving delicate and tender plants, but we still associate a greenhouse with an artificial hot and humid atmosphere.

This association has been the cause of the disastrous results experienced by amateurs who attempted to operate a small greenhouse, and the reason for the many delapidated and forlorn structures to be seen in gardens.

Interest in small greenhouses has increased over the last few years as more home gardeners have taken up the almost forgotten art of growing a portion of their annual food requirements. The idea of lengthening the production period, and the early starting of seedlings for next year's garden, is again being considered.

If you are thinking along these lines, first discard the antiquated belief that a greenhouse is a "hot house." Think of it as an overgrown coldframe, one you can walk into, and in which you can work in any kind of weather.

The advantages of a greenhouse over a coldframe are the increased volume of enclosed air which gives more equitable temperatures; easier ventilation and less chilling of the plants, also due to the large air volume; easier working conditions because the operator is protected from the weather, and the opportunity to do the work in an upright position instead of on the knees.

The kinds of vegetables that can be grown successfully over winter are the same as those recommended for a coldrame. They do not require coddling or heated conditions, only protection from excessive rain which cools the soil and stops growth, blustery winds which damage the foilage, and severe low temperatures.

When considering a greenhouse you will be told that polyethlene film over a light wooden frame is the easiest and cheapest to built. That is correct.

You will not be told that the excessive condensation on the inside of the plastic, the rapid heat loss through plastic, and the lack of cracks to keep the air circulating, are problems requiring automatic equipment to correct, which raises the over-all cost to three times that of a wood and glass structure.

Nor will you be warned that the roof will start splitting about the last week of August and the sidewall panels will split in the first November gale, so that the entire house has to be resheathed with film every August while the weather is warm to aid stretching the film, and winds are reasonably light. Five-mil film is no less prone to deterioration in sunlight than 2-mil.

The size of the house you can build is controlled by local regulations. It will be six feet by eight feet, eight by 10 or 10 by 12, according to where you live.

Such houses need adequate ventilation; four roof nts 36 by 24 inches placed opposite each other for through draft to such out the hot air in summer, and to prevent cold down-drafts in winter.

It is also necessary in a small greenhouse to have a large vent mounted on loose-pin hinges in the end wall opposite the door for a through current of air on windless days in summer.

Good ventilation without chilling drafts on the plants, which is needed summer and winter, will eliminate most of the greenhouse problems that plague the amateur. Always remember, fresh air is more important than heat for growing healthy plants, especially winter vegetables.

If vegetables are to be grown in ground beds each side of the centre walk, it will be necessary to have glass down to the wooden sill on top of the foundation. It will also be necessary to have handy some four by eight-foot sheets of cheap three-ply to hang on outside nails for insulation in the envent of a winter cold spell. These protect the lower four-feet of glass.

The three-ply sheets, or any other form of insulation, must be easily removable to allow sun and light to reach the plants in the beds during daylight hours.

When soil beds are constructed on benches, the sidewalls of the greenhouse can be made of wood to the height of the bench and packed with insulation material, sawdust crumpled newspapers.

Whichever method is used, compost will be needed in which to grow the vegetables. Four ground beds the soil and weeds are removed to a depth of 14 inches, the removed soil being useful in making future compost heaps.

Two inches of coarse sand and small gravel go into the bottom of the excavation for drainage, and 14 inches (to allow for settling) of compost, if possible mixed with old cow or horse manure, on top. Planks may be needed along the walk side of the beds to keep the soil in place when being worked.

An enclosed bench, or boxes placed on a bench, should be 12 inches deep with the same sand and gravel base and at least 10 inches of compost mix on top. The weight will necessitate sturdy bench construction.

A greenhouse should be sited in the open away from tree shade, but perferably with a residence or high fence on the north to northeast to give shelter from outflow winds which accompany Artic air in the winter.

The entrance door is normally placed on the south to southwest end of the structure to prevent northerly winds from chilling the plants when the door is opened.

It is not too early to formulate definite plans if a greenhouse is being considered as a possible addition to extend the season of fresh vegetable production.

By the time a pre-cut greenhouse of permissible dimensions has been acquired, the ventilation system brought to required standards for trouble-free operation, the stucture erected, compost made and manure delivered, it will be time to make the first sowings for late fall and early winter use.

WEEK'S WORK

Weed, cultivate and water around parsnips, tuberous artichokes, rhubarb. These are permanent crops that will not produce good results if neglected in summer.

Sow seeds of flowering perennials by end of month — Columbine, Blue flax, Catmint, Coreopsis and Erigeron are suggestions for next year's flower border.

Gooseberry and currant, and all the berry fruits, need a constant supply of moisture at roots. Do not water fruiting plants overhead or fruiting will be poor. This also applies to squash, marrow, cucumber and tomato plants, and sweet peppers, okra and eggplants.

Take cuttings of pinks now to root in sandy soil; carnations may be layered by pegging down into screened compost kept constantly damp.

Thin out the late sowings of vegetables to give them a chance to grow to usable sizes at the time you need them.

Lettuce, turnip, spinach and Swiss chard thinnings can be used either as green salad or lightly steamed as hot vegetable.

Nuke-Toll: 100M Russians

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — About 100 million Soviet civilians would die from a U.S. nuclear counterattack despite that country's $2 billion civil defense effort, the Central Intelligence Agency said in a report.

The CIA, while stating that Soviet civil defence preparation have been intensifying since the "late 1960s," concluded the Russian program has many of the shortcomings of our own, including "apathy" by "a large segment of the population."

The Soviet population is not protected from attack to the extent that the Kremlin could logically regard nuclear war as a risk worth taking,the CIA said.

To make a nuclear war thinkable, the agency said, Soviet planners would have to evacuate their people to protect them from an American counterattack. But such an evacuation would have to take place days before Soviet missiles were launched, the CIA said, denying surprise.

In summing up whether defences are effective enough to make Soviet leaders believe nuclear war with the United States could be a winning proposition, the CIA made this statement:

"We do not believe that the Soviets' present civil defences would embolden them deliberately to expose the USSR to a higher risk of nuclear attack."

Sen. John C. Culver, D-Iowa, in a press conference termed the CIA report "the first comprehensive and authoritative analysis" of the Soviet civil defence program to be made public.

Its key finding, he said, is that the expanded Soviet civil defence program does not "adversely affect the strategic balance" between the United States and the Soviet Union.

Some arms specialists have been arguing that the Soviets improved defences against nuclear attack, including protecting their leaders, workers and vital industries, indicate the Kremlin is preparing to both wage and survive a nuclear war with the United States.

These were other findings in the CIA's 16-page report:

—The Soviet civil defence program "is not a crash effort, but its pace increased beginning in the late 1960s" and now involves a bureaucracy of "over 100,000 full-time personnel."

—"A sustained effort has been made to provide blast shelters for the leadership and essential personnel, about 110,000 people," but there have been no "significant" attempts to disperse industry nor make existing factories harder to destroy with nuclear weapons.

—About 12 percent to 24 percent of Soviet workers "at key economic installations" could be fit into existing bomb shelters, while 10 to 20 percent of the total city population could be protected from nuclear attack.

—"Over 100 million" Soviet civilians would die from a U.S. nuclear retaliatory attack made under the "worst conditions for the USSR" but "a large percentage" of Soviet leaders would survive.

—"Under the most favorable conditions for the USSR, including a week or more to complete urban evacuation and then to protect the evacuated population, Soviet civil defences could reduce casualties to the low tens of millions."

—Although "many" of the workers in bomb shelters would survive, "the Soviets could not prevent massive damage to their economy and the destruction of many of their most valued material accomplishments."

The CIA, in arriving at those conclusions, assured that the United States in its nuclear counterattack did not zero in on the Soviet population but on factories and military installations.

Culver, chairman of the Senate Armed Services subcommittee that oversees the U.S. Civil Defence program, said that the United States could kill even more Soviet civilians, if there were any reason to do so, by using different kinds of H-bombs than those now deployed and by zeroing in on the civilian population.

The difficulties in building an effective defense against nuclear war, no matter how much is spent, argue for a cautious approach to proposals for "a costly crash program" in the United States, Culver said.

The Pentagon, in response to the Soviets' stepped up civil defence effort, is considering a more ambitious undertaking, which Culver said could cost $2 billion over five years. The CIA estimated it would cost $2 billion in 1976 dollars to duplicate the Soviet civil defense program in existence that year.

$4M Sale Of Games Tickets

EDMONTON (CP) — About $4 million worth of Commonwealth Games tickets had been sold by Thursday, and officials hope the final sales figure will be around $4.7 million.

Jim McGregor, tickets and accommodation co-ordinator for the Games Foundation, said Thursday that 100,000 tickets remain unsold "and with that potential we could make $4.7 million."

"We're still hopeful we could sell it out" to earn about $5 million in revenue, McGregor said.

He said that "it would be the first time since the 1936 Olympics" that an international sporting event sold all tickets.

The 1978 Games have sold more than 75 per cent of all tickets to date. The 1976 Montreal Olympics sold 87 per cent and the 1974 Commonwealth Games in New Zealand 81 per cent.

Job Vacancies

OTTAWA (CP) — Statistics Canada reported Thursday that the average number of jobs vacant on a daily basis increased by 22 per cent to 46,200 between April and June from 37,900 in the previous quarter — but this is a seven per cent decline in available jobs from the comparable three months in 1977.

13th-Century Seals Found

PEKING (Reuter) — Three official seals made of copper and dating from the 13th century have been uncovered in the northeast China province of Heilungkiang, the New China News Agency reported Tuesday.

Two seals inscribed with Chinese characters are from late in the Kin dynasty (1115-1234 AD), while a third engraved in Mongolian on one side with a Chinese translation on the other dates from the beginning of the Yuan dynasty (1271-1368), the agency said.

NO. 1 CHESS FIGURE OF 1977

For over a decade, El Corte Ingles, a giant Barcelona department store, has offered the Caissa Award to the most prominent figures in the world of chess. Members of the Chess Journalists Society, an international organization, rate the leading players on a 10-1 scale, 10 points for first place down to one point for tenth. When the returns were totted up earlier this month, first place, for the fifth year in a row, went to World Champion Anatoly Karpov of Russia. Only four points behind (623-619) was Viktor Korchnoi, a defector from Russia who this year (it looks now as if it will be in early summer in the Philippines) will try to take away Karpov's crown.

Following these two were the USSR's Oleg Romanishin and Mikhael Tal, England's Anthony Miles, Denmark's Bent Larson, Russia's Boris Spassky, Czechoslovakia's Vlastimil Hort, Hungary's Lajos Portisch, Russia's Tigran Petrosian. (The US's Walter Browne got only seven points.)

BROWNE WINS AT REYKJAVIK

Despite his rating among the chess journalists, Walter Browne of Berkeley won the International Tournament in Reykjavik last month, scoring 9 points out of 13. Here is his game against Vlastimil Hort of Czechoslovakia.

FRIDRIK THE GREAT

Iceland's Fridrik Olafsson, a lawyer and Grandmaster, is also one of the most beloved personalities on the chess scene today. It is quite likely, too, that he will be the next president of FIDE, the International Chess Federation. In the following game, he takes the measure of another great figure from his part of the world, Bent Larsen of Denmark. Played at the 1978 Reykjavik International.

Here's How To Get The Edge

This lion pajama case is crocheted

KNIT AND CHAT

By MAY E. MacLEAN

This past week I have been working on several projects for my TV series which is now being shown in the Toronto and mid-Ontario area. Soon it will be seen across Canada. Just in case you have missed it, look for Celebrity Crafts.

I have found it very pleasant summer knitting and crochet with Cronita cotton, basing one program around edgings. It's really surprising how they dress up a plain ordinary tablecloth or dresser scarf, and even around the bottom of a tennis dress. The latter I crochet in color, placing the edging level with the edge of the tennis dress.

The following is a simple 12 rows pattern which I knitted in ecru Cronita cotton, then sewed around the edge of a round tablecloth made out of a single wash and wear sheet. There was enough for a 62-inch round cloth, plus six napkins.

Using No. 10 needles, cast on 13 stitches. 1st row:— Slip one, knit two, wool forward, knit two together, knit one, then wool forward and knit 2 together twice, wool forward, knit three. 14 stitches on needle.

2nd & every alternate row:— Knit.

3rd row:— Slip one, knit two, wool forward, knit 2 together, knit 2, then wool forward and knit 2 together twice, wool forward, knit 3. 15 stitches on needle.

5th row:— Slip one, knit 2, wool forward, knit 2 together, knit 3, then wool forward and knit 2 together twice, wool forwad, knit 3. 16 stitches on needle.

7th row:— Slip one, knit 2 wool forward, knit 2 together, knit 4, then wool forward and knit 2 together twice, wool forward, knit 3. 17 stitches on needle.

9th row:— Slip one, knit 2, wool forward, knit 2 together, knit 5, then wool forward and knit 2 together twice, wool forward, knit 3. 18 stitches on needle.

11th row:— Slip one, knit 2, wool forward, knit 2 together, knit 13.

12th row:— Cast off 5 stitches loosely and knit to end of row. 13 stitches now again on needle. Repeat these 12 rows for the pattern until you have the desired length, casting off after a 12th row.

Knitted and crocheted edgings are very portable and take very little room in your bag, and it's so handy to have something to do, especially if you can memorize the pattern. I found this particular edging most attractive and worked up really fast. I used three balls of Cronita to work round my tablecloth, but of course the amount will depend on the size of the tablecloth.

This very attractive lion pajama case is crocheted. If the teen-agers can't be bothered to put their pyjamas inside, use it as a cushion. It's simple yet fun to make, great for bazaar sale or work tables or for gift giving. So why not get a head start? I've noticed so many of you are writing for patterns on the Christmas themes. It's a very good idea to make these when one is not so busy.

To order this week's pattern No. 7864, send 75 cents, plus a stamped self-addressed return envelope, a long one if possible. If you do not have a stamp or envelope, please enclose an extra 25 cents to cover the cost of handling and print your name and address. Sent to May E. MacLean, Knit and Chat, 486 Montford Dr., Dollard des Ormeaux, Roxboro, Que.

Please be sure to state pattern numbers correctly when ordering and to enclose your stamped return envelope for faster handling. Allow about two weeks for normal delivery. May catalogue is available, price 25 cents, and all back numbers in my series are available, price 75 cents. All orders must be accompanied with a stamped return envelope, or an extra 25 cents.

Volunteers Ready

NEW YORK (AP) — Responding to an appeal by the federal government, 102 young physicians, dentists and other health professionals have signed up to work in slum and rural areas of New York, New Jersey, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: Our car was damaged by a drunken driver who works at the same factory as my husband. The estimated cost of having it repaired is $700.

My husband didn't want to have the other man booked for drunken driving, so instead of calling the police to report it right away, my husband called the man's wife to take him home and sober him up.

The wife couldn't sober him up, so she came back to the scene of the accident and told the police that she was the driver of the car, instead of her husband. My husband backed her up.

My husband and I have been going round and round about this. I told him that he was dead wrong to have agreed to such a thing — the police should have been notified at once, and if they booked the other man for drunk driving, it might teach him a good lesson. I don't think drunken drivers should be protected. What do you think?

DISGUSTED

DEAR DISGUSTED: I'm with you. Not only is the drunken driver now free to repeat the offence (and possibly cause a more serious accident), but also your husband is a party to falsifying an accident report — a serious offence!

DEAR ABBY: Through a very reliable source, we found out that our son has been peeping into various neighbors' windows. He is an average teen-age boy, brought up in a respectable home. We have no idea why he does this.

Because of the humiliation that would be brought upon the family, we do not wish to consult a doctor. Can you help us? — VERY SMALL TOWN.

DEAR VERY: Yes. I can "help" you by assuring you that you would suffer no "humiliation" whatsoever by consulting a doctor.

If your son had a "kink" in his back, you'd seek medical advice in order to correct it, wouldn't you? So why, when he has an obvious "kink" in his thinking, do you choose to ignore it?

Window peeping is usually a symptom of a deeper emotional problem and should be neither hushed up nor ignored. You owe it to your son (and to society) to get him to a doctor.

A Feverish Scent To Barocco Styles

ROME (AP) — Fever is the password for Barocco's new fall and winter collection.

It's the name of the perfume he introduced at his showing, and the clothes he showed are feverishly exciting.

Barocco said the perfume, his first, is "a little naughty, a little risque, in a word sensual." The same words describe his collection which brought the vamp styles of the 1940s into a sensual 1978 perspective.

Yards of ostrich feathers, boxed shoulders, pill box hats and pancake caps, strass brooches, stiletto heels and silk seamed stockings brought back memories of Ginger Rogers in her heyday, updated by a slinkier, trimmer and at the same time softer look.

A blouse ruffled at the shoulder and down the bodice, loose chiffon blouses tied in a big bow at the waist and soft silk Indian ankled evening pants gave the collection a more gentle line, while the tightness of the skirts, the bold colors and the continuous use of the pajama pant showed the growing emancipation of today's woman.

Barocco unfolded a series of auburn gold and black silk pant or skirt prints with tight cummerbund waists worn with matching solid-color gilets and ocelot pill boxes deep on the forehead.

Grey and black silk jersey evening gowns were strapless or spaghetti-haltered, topped by contrasting velvet boleros and velvet pill boxes. Strass brooches pinned a single feather to the hats.

A winter negligee coat was in bright shades of red, green and blue satin. Another one in black and white with wide sleeves and hemline was trimmed in sumptuous ostrich feathers.

Others showing included newcomer Milena Francesio and Giorgio Zingone, who designs for children.

Francesio, from Turin, broke no new ground but showed a well-put-together collection. Noteworthy were a line of double-breasted, tailored wool gabardine coats worn with fox scarves complete with paws and mask.

Zingone, whose outfits can run to $500, takes much of his inspiration this year from the 19th century, with loose smock dresses and lace collars for the girls, knee-length shorts and wide-collared shirts for the boys.

The colors are soft blues, grays, greens, the fabrics light wool and quilted cotton.

With DOROTHY FRASER

Huge choice of quality leather goods . . .

A friend and ourselves were conversing on the subject of "specialty stores" the other day . . . Nice, she conceded, but certainly more expensive, no? . . . No way! we replied . . . And the advantages of shopping in such a store are enormous! . . . By way of illustration we cited McMartin's Leather Goods . . . a specialty store whose windows we never pass without scanning for inevitable bargains! . . . McMartin's unquestionably have the biggest selection of quality luggage in Victoria . . . all the famous brands you've ever heard of . . . plus others you probably haven't . . . at completely competitive prices . . . (see the big soft-sided pullman case with wheels for only $49.50!) . . . What you get in this store is larger stock from which to choose . . . an enormous selection of quality handbags, billfolds, wallets, tote bags . . . brief cases, attache cases, portfolios . . . passport cases, jewellery rolls . . . plus many, many other items either made of leather or classified as "leather goods" . . . all these things at reasonable, competitive prices, shown to you by competent people who really know their job, and what the word "service" means! . . . We paid McMartin's a visit this week, and were delighted with all we saw . . . Right now they've a special on handsome plaid tote bags . . . regularly $36, for just $18 . . . It's a terrific buy for anyone taking off on a trip! . . . Another great acquisition for a traveller is the collapsible luggage trolley . . . so light you can hold it with one finger . . . Just $22! . . . McMartin's Leather Goods, 1605 Douglas St., 384-6613.

New Viyella dressing gowns at Wilson's . . .

There are precious few mornings in Victoria when . . . no matter how hot the day eventually turns out to be . . . you don't feel happy with the bit of warmth provided by a Viyella dressing gown! . . . This also goes for evenings en famille when you're curled up in front of the TV . . . Some of the prettiest Viyella gowns it's been our pleasure to see have just arrived at Wilson's . . . Three basic styles . . . one with a round neck piped with satin . . . zips right down the front. Black, blue, brown rust and camel prints . . . A second style is a float with collar . . . also front-zipped . . . This is fuller cut, with raglan sleeves . . . Comes in white with pink floral sprays, a border print, and small flowers on blue or red ground . . . Finally, the ever-popular classic wrap gown, in paisleys, tartans and plains . . . Another style soon to be in has mandarin collar, frog closing and concealed zipper . . . All these Viyellas are priced at but $50 . . . Viyella bed jackets will soon be here too . . . One with Peter Pan collar, ¾-length sleeves . . . floral sprays on white and satin piping . . . the other a bit more feminine with touches of lace, on a print pattern . . . $25 for these . . . So if your old Viyella gown's wearing out, now's the time to get a new one! . . . While you're in, see the delightful jacquard woven pictures made in Coventry England, by Cash's, the name-tape people . . . Butterflies and flowers . . . or birds . . . nicely framed and boxed. These make super gifts! . . . W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177 and 1210 Newport Ave., 592-2821.

Design Centre at your service . . .

Summer's with us now . . . but in a couple of months it will be fall . . . when many people are planning on moving into new homes . . . or doing renovations on their present homes now while the weather is good . . . Should you be among their number . . . this is perhaps the time to think about getting the services of a good interior designer . . . specifically someone from Standard Furniture's Design Centre . . . to help you plan and co-ordinate your draperies, wall and floor coverings . . . Advise you on lighting fixtures and accessories as well as pieces of furniture which will add a spark to your decor . . . Standard Furniture, over the years, has become known for the tremendous quality, not only of their furniture but of their designers . . . who are available to assist you . . . perhaps planning a room around some treasured heirloom . . . or starting afresh . . . This service is free to you when you make your new purchases at Standard . . . by Standard's Interior Design Centre where several new faces have recently made their appearance on the team . . . Margaret Bigelow, just recently returned from working in California . . . Mort Jensen, a graduate in interior design from the University of Manitoba . . . and Roy Scott who joined Standard after extensive practice in the interior of B.C. . . . These experienced designers are on call, so feel free to ask at the store and they'll set up an appointment for one of them to call at your home . . . Naturally this service, as well as all merchandise, is backed up with Standard's guarantee of satisfaction! . . . Standard Furniture Co. 737 Yates St., 382-5111.

New and lovely for fall . . .

We timed our last visit to the Bay's Mirror Room to perfection . . . just in time to get a first look at some of the new fall things which had arrived that very day! . . . What has to be the fashion bargain of the year is a terrific 4-pce. herringbone tweed suit by Arnoldi . . . Only $200 for the whole works! . . . The jacket has suede trim and button detailing on the pockets . . . Skirt has a deep pleat in front . . . Pants fit really beautifully . . . and the vest is cut straight at the bottom so as not to accentuate your tummy! . . . You can make all sorts of combinations with these four pieces, with the addition of a blouse and, say, a turtleneck sweater . . . (Some lovely 100% cashmere pullovers have just arrived too . . . turtleneck, boat neck tying on the side, and one with a drawstring waist) . . . Another excellent buy is a pure silk boucle knit dress, tagged at only $90 . . . It's beautifully simple with its raglan shouldered batwing sleeves and tie neck and belt . . . Comes in camel, black, cinnamon and wood rose . . . Jones New York 2 pce. dress separates are most attractive . . . Shirt in a small figured rayon which looks like wool challis . . . The dirndl skirt is particularly pretty gathered into an inserted waistband trimmed with narrow velvet ribbon . . . Burgundy with navy, and navy with burgundy . . . More Jones New York co-ordinates are made of a cotton baby cord, in camel or navy . . . Pants, skirt, smart jacket and vest in this group at . . . The Bay Mirror Room, 385-1311, loc. 280

Feast your eyes on some of these . . .

For some of us it's a bit of a problem finding slips in the proper length for the new clothes, so we were pleased to see a couple of new half-slips at Dion's Boudoir Boutique which fill the bill admirably! One, in a satin-like nylon tricot has a frill edged with lace . . . the other is a plain half-slip in crepe de chine with narrow lace around the bottom . . . Dion's have brought in a few 100% cotton knit vests and briefs by Lux Lux of England . . . The daintiest things you ever saw . . . and we predict they'll prove very, very popular! Also new at Dion's is the advent of blouses . . . Right now they just have one style by Kay Silver . . . a long-sleeved qiana with a very flattering low cowl neck, in ivory or black . . . More blouses will be coming in, though . . . There's a Mr. Gilbert evening blouse and dress which looks rather startling on the hanger, but is simply gorgeous on . . . Plaid wool skirt in electric blue, purple and burgundy . . . light burgundy tuck-in satin blouse, scoop neck threaded with a narrow tie . . . We saw some very smart short dresses . . . one in rust with batwing sleeves . . . A loose camel sport dress whose roll-up sleeves are caught in tabs . . . And elegant long dress by Bard . . . floral pattern on a brown background . . . A one-of-a-kind Mr. Gilbert cocktail pajama outfit . . . shocking pink with a very full top . . . sleeves which extend to the bottom of the tunic . . . Simply smashing! . . . Dion's Boudoir Boutique, Hillside Shopping Centre, 595-5444.

Ultrasuede coats that laugh at the cold! . . .

If you're mad about ultrasuede but are afraid it won't be warm enough for real winter weather . . . do go and see the Montroy collection now in display in Eaton's Signature Shop! . . . The new fall colors are beautiful . . . burgundy, brown, forest green, camel, charcoal . . . and the coats are all completely and warmly lined . . . One buttoned style has an acrylic and nylon lining . . . even in the sleeves . . . which forms the trim in the flip-back cuff and stand-up collar . . . as well being used for a long scarf . . . Another coat, ideal for Victoria, has a button-in wool lining and a long matching fringed scarf . . . A classic A-line coat with satin lining is interlined with wind-proof chamois . . . And for the woman who wants the very warm, cozy look . . . there's an ultrasuede wrap coat completely lined . . . including the sleeves . . . with borg . . . Two other interesting pieces in the Montroy collection are the walking suit . . . Finger-tip length ultrasuede jacket lined with tweed, and a matching tweed skirt . . . Finally very "Vogueish" and an important new look for fall . . . the idea of wearing a big vest over one's topcoat . . . The Montroy coat at Eaton's is a classic herringbone tweed in mink shade, over which is worn a large ultrasuede vest . . . Very different and eye-catching! . . . Eaton's Signature Shop, 382-7141, loc. 242.

Do your friends a favor . . .

We had occasion to buy a wedding gift just recently . . . and since we don't know the bride too well, were really at our wit's end trying to figure out what she'd like . . . Couldn't help thinking what a cinch it would have been had she only been registered at Eaton's Bridal Registry! . . . The moral of this is, if you're getting married sometime soon . . . give a thought to your friends . . . They'll really thank you for your thoughtfulness in registering at Eaton's . . . From your own point of view, by filling out the Preference List the bridal consultant will give you, you can indicate your patterns, colors, taste in decor . . . for every single room in your new home . . . so people buying you gifts can consult it and know exactly what has already been purchased . . . what you need and what you'd like . . . without having to run around enquiring of your family . . . Another plus . . . because the Preference List is so all-inclusive . . . they can find something you'd like at a price they can afford to pay . . . Eaton's bridal consultants will gladly help you in every way possible . . . at no charge, of course! . . . In the Registry you can select your invitations, thank-you notes, serviettes, etc. . . . Eaton's will take care of the printing . . . and on top of this you'll receive two free gifts . . . a bride's book and a household encyclopedia! . . . Eaton's Bridal Registry, 382-7141, loc. 373.

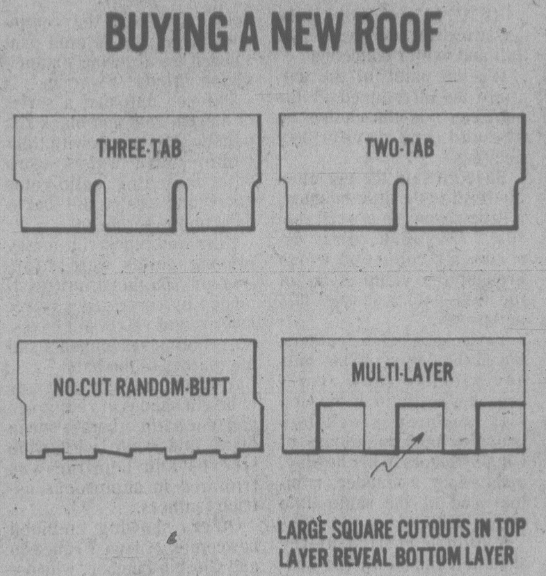
HAND AROUND THE HOUSE

New Roof? Do It Right

By A. J. HAND

Nobody buys a new roof because he wants to. He does it because the shingles he has are wearing out and possibly even beginning to leak.

Since the average asphalt roofing shingle lasts at least 15 years, you won't need to reroof very often. But when the time comes, make the most of it. Don't automatically replace the old shingles with exact copies. Make sure the new shingles are of the exact style, color and quality you want. After all, you will probably be living with them for the next 15 to 25 years.



Copyright © 1978 POPULAR SCIENCE

Most of the shingles you see on roofs today are like the common three-tab style shown in the sketch. When installed each of the tabs looks like an individual shingle. Three-tabs do a good job, but they look rather plain on your roof. If you'd like your home to look more distinctive, consider a different type such as the two-tab, the no-cut staggered-butt, or a multi-layer type.

Two-tab shingles are the same as three-tabs except that they have two tabs about 18 inches wide instead of three 12-inchers. This design de-emphasizes the vertical or "bond" lines in the roof in favor of the horizontal or "course" lines. It tends to make the roof look longer.

The no-cut staggered-butt design has no vertical cuts at all, so it produces an even stronger horizontal effect on your roof. You might use this type to emphasize the length of your home. The staggered butts of these shingles help keep the horizontal line from becoming too pronounced and monotonous. They also give the roof a slightly more eye-catching look than tabbed shingles.

Multi-layer shingles are actually made of two layers of shingle material fastened together. The top layer has very wide square cutouts. When installed, these shingles have a pronounced three-dimensional effect that looks very much like a wooden shake roof. In fact, most of these shingles are made in natural wood tones as a deliberate attempt to simulate shake.

That brings us to your next consideration: Color. Browns and earth tones are very popular today. But for the purpose of energy conservation, white is the most practical color. It will keep your home much cooler in the summer. At one time white shingles had a tendency to discolor due to algae or mildew growths. But today most shingles are made with special white granules that resist such growths.

Whatever color you choose, select it from actual shingles, not from printed samples. And be sure that all the shingles for your roof are from the same production run or the color may vary considerably.

For years the general index of quality in asphalt roofing shingles was weight. The heavier the shingle the longer it lasted. This is still true for standard shingles made on a base of organic felt (tar paper). But a relatively new type of shingle made on a base of fibreglass instead of felt is an exception to the rule. It can be as light or even lighter than conventional felt-based shingles with a 15-year warranty. Yet it may be warranted for 20 or even 25 years.

The fibreglass-based asphalt shingle is also much more resistant to curling, rotting and buckling than conventional shingles. Best of all, it earns a Class A fire rating. That's the highest rating for fire resistance possible. Finally, the fibreglass-based shingle costs just a bit more than conventional shingles, and that makes it the best buy in roofing today.

Bio-dex

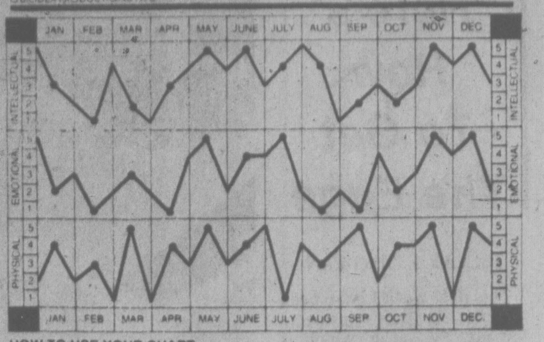
Your computerized biorhythm

©BIODEX PRODUCTIONS 1978

Dist. by Toronto Sun Syndicate



HOW TO USE YOUR CHART:

Locate your month of birth. The dots on each graph highlight your biorhythm readouts. Check the scales on the left or right for your Intellectual, Emotional and Physical factors, from 1 to 5. Add these three numbers to obtain your Bio-dex. The Bio-dex is computed on average population age based on official Government statistics.

BIO-DEX READOUT:

0-5 Negative Cycle - You're approaching an over weight problem, so eat better and less.

6-10 Neutral Cycle - As your neutral cycle spirals upward, you'll find life's little hassles will disturb you less.

11-15 Positive Cycle - No need to knock on wood; your high cycle means things are as bright as they look.

From a low cycle, thoughts of the mysteries of life can be of great positive value, rather than a source of worry. In this hectic world, we don't often have the time to consider the infinite, so if your thoughts seem to be taking you there, don't fight! Others have found light in dark places and so can you.

BIO-DEX READOUT:

0-5 Negative Cycle - Impatience may make you reckless. If you drive, heed the rules of the road very closely.

6-10 Neutral Cycle - Been avoiding the dentist lately? You may regret it in the very near future.

11-15 Positive Cycle - Someone's got their eye on you. Don't neglect your appearance for the next few days.

Although accidents can happen anywhere, you can make an effort to avoid those places where they are most likely to occur during your low cycle. Try browsing through an antique store or an art gallery. In your efforts to overcome a critical day, you may discover a pastime you really enjoy.

Common ¢ents

About the only time a couple of inches make much difference in a bed sheet's length is when you need that extra length to make easy-care, pre-hemmed sheet curtains or draperies for a long window or for lining long draperies. Check the actual length on sheets you buy for such purposes. Some sheet makers will be cutting two or three inches off some sheet lengths this year.

Warm up a dirty windshield before you push the "wash" button on a cold, cold day. Even a washing fluid with antifreeze tends to freeze on cold glass. That's a waste of cleaner and time — you have to scrape off the frozen wash.

Most older oil-burning furnaces included in a test proved to be oversized and burned oil faster than the heat could be used, and the unused heat was lost up the chimney. Field tests showed that reducing the nozzle size for spraying oil into the burner lets the system run longer but burns less oil and wastes less heat. If the oil-air mix is proper and no soot clogs parts, the smaller nozzle could save 14 per cent in heating costs, according to the test experts.

Hot Water Bags Need Extra Care

A patient was in my office yesterday, suffering from a severe burn caused by the improper use of a hot water bag. It occurred to me that a great many people do not know how to prepare such a bag.

The hot water bag should not contain air. Before securely corking the bag, the air should be expelled, making certain that no leak exists. The bag should then be covered with a soft cloth, bringing comfort without inviting a burn. Bags that are too heavy with water or too hot defeat their comforting purpose. Especially when used for frail, debilitated patients, it must be remembered that their skin is delicate and more sensitive and can easily be injured by excessive heat.

A good precaution is to look at the skin after the hot water bag has been in place for a few minutes. If there is any unusual redness, then the heat is probably too great. In general, water heated above 150 F. should be considered too hot for the soothing effect that is intended.

Every once in a while I find specks of blood when I move my bowels. It doesn't last long. Is this something that should be checked on? — Mr. G.V.

Dear Mr. V.:

Without question, the cause should be determined, even though the most frequent cause is usually some form of hemorrhoid.

Despite all the educational campaigns, some people delay going to their doctor for fear that their rectal bleeding is serious. It may be. But the likelihood is that it is of no great importance. Even after patients have been reassured the problem is a simple one, the distress of fear may last a long time.

Bright red blood usually means that a broken blood vessel in and around hemorrhoids may be responsible. Occasionally, a polyp in the rectum can also be the cause. There need be no guesswork because there now are excellent, simple and painless ways to detemine the exact site of the bleeding.

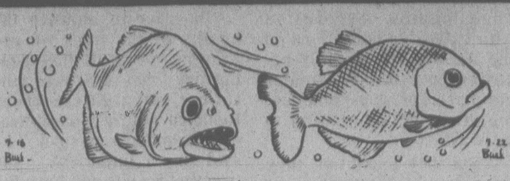
It's Against the Law Either Way

By DR. FRANK MILLER

Wonderful World of Animals



DEAR DR. MILLER: I've heard it's illegal to buy piranhas now. What if you had a pair of piranhas and bred them? It couldn't be aginst the law to breed them, could it? — K.Y.

DEAR K.Y.: It could be against the law to have them in the first place — and it would be against the laws of nature for them to breed in captivity in the second place. Pairs of piranhas in captivity are rarely, almost never, passionate. This is a matter of priorities. Food is first — so one of the pair would usually eat the other . . . the ultimate, drastic, system of birth control . . .

DEAR DR. MILLER: We've read about getting a puppy at seven or eight weeks because this is the best time for the puppy to get used to people. But what if the puppy is younger or older? Could it still adapt to people well? If so, how much younger or older could it be? — T.E.

DEAR T.E.: The ideal period for puppy socialization with its new owners and home is indeed seven or eight weeks. Actually, this process begins as early as three weeks in the pup and continues through three months. The mid-point is best, however, since starting too soon doesn't allow correct socialization of the puppy with littermates and, hence, other dogs. It is also more likely to become overly dependent on humans. Conversely, the canine youngster who does not fraternize with humans until later on into the third month or beyond is more likely to be dog-oriented than human-oriented and thus be less responsive (to people).

DEAR DR. MILLER: It's Clarissa, my cat, who has a bit of a discharge in the inner corners of her eyes. I don't consider that this amounts to a thing since her eyes in no way look sore or irritated. Don't some cats just normally have this? — R.M.

DEAR R.M.: While some cats (and dogs) may have a small amount of eye discharge of seemingly no consequence, it can't accurately be considered normal. It may not be serious but whether it's an eye condition which could be transmissible to other animals or which may become serious eventually is a question. I generally like to see such eye conditions cleared up when feasible and practical even when it doesn't appear potentially serious. Clarissa's consultant, after an examination, would have to determine what is most appropriate in her case.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Alfie's erping up his seeds. One friend tells me when a parakeet does this it is a sign he is in good shape and wants to breed so I'm not supposed to worry. Another friend says worry, a bird that's spitting up seeds is sick. I have the feeling one of my friends is wrong but I don't know which one. — S.O.

DEAR S.O.: Actually they may both be right. But to find out which answer is right for Alfie, simply watch what he is doing. If he is merely feeding the mirror or perch or some other object and perhaps eventually re-eating seed, then he is more likely sexy than sick. If, on the other hand, Alfie's actually throwing the seed out of his mouth with a shake of his head, this is an indication of digestive disturbance and should be a call for professional help.

There are many reasons why you may want to know how the weather is in different parts of Canada.

The collection of Tempeature, Precipitation, Sunshine and Frost Data for Selected Stations in Canada offers detailed climatic information of more than 50 places in Canada. Let's compare just those of Ottawa and Vancouver.

Ottawa is 126 m above sea level, Vancouver is 5. The mean temperature in January and July and the mean annual temperature in Ottawa is —11°C, 21°C and 6°C respectively. For Vancouver, these figures are 2°C, 17°C and 10°C.

In Ottawa, total annual precipitation amounts to 850.9 mm and the total annual snowfall to 215.9 cm. The month with the most precipitation is August. In Vancouver, total annual precipitation amounts to 1,068 mm and the annual snowfall to 52.4 cm. The month with the most precipitation is December.

During the past 30 years, Ottawa had 142 frost-free days and Vancouver 212. During the same period in Ottawa, the first frost occurred on Oct. 1 and the last on May 29. In Vancouver the first frost was on Oct. 30 and the last on March 31.

For the climatic data, write to: Pacific Region, Atmospheric Environment Service, 739 West Hastings Street, Vancouver, B.C. V6C 1A1.

This attractive butler's table doubles as both a coffee table and a serving tray. Its top lifts off for serving, then fits back firmly on the leg assembly for use as a table.

Friction hinges position its four leaves at any angle from horizontal to vertical to convert it to a tray with built-in handles. Cleats on the underside cleverly position the tray top on its four legs so it won't slide off.

It's not a difficult job, but neither is it a hammer and saw project. Tools required include a router to form the semicircular hinge mortises and round the edges, a table saw and moulding cutter to form the decorative corner beading on the legs, a sabre saw to cut the tray leaves and hand grips and a drill press to form the stretcher mortises.

To order the Butler's Table pattern No. 55030, send $2.50 cheque or money order plus 50 cents for postage and handling to Dec-Plans, c/o Victoria Times, P.O. Box 90, Boucherville, Que.

Genetic Traits Altered With Dum-Dum Bullets

VANCOUVER (CP) — When Crown Zellerbach, the huge logging corporation with extensive operations on the West Coast, recently appeared on a list as a major purchaser of guns and ammunition, police wanted to know why.

When they found out, they were just as surprised as most people at the company.

During the last three years, Crown Zellerbach has bought at least 3,000 rounds of .22-calibre shells of the hollow-nose variety commonly known as dum-dums.

Detective R. L. Gunn said the city police inquiry was prompted by recently enacted federal gun-control legislation.

When the company publication, Crown Zellerbach News, heard of the inquiry, it launched its own investigation.

The publication got a lead from Norm White in the purchasing department: It was not guns the company had bought but ammunition. And the foresters were using the ammunition to shoot trees, not people or animals.

Joe Pegues, the company's operations forester, said the trees were shot for a good cause — forest genetics.

"In order to improve the quality of the trees we are growing, we graft the growing tips from plus trees (the tallest, straightest trees found in nature's backyard) on to ordinary root stock," he said in an interview. "The tree that results will have the plus-tree characteristics and so will the seed it produces."

The growing tip of the plus tree is at the top, often up to 50 metres from the ground, and the only way it can be reached is by shooting it off.

Pegues said the reason so much ammunition is required is that the tree's upper branches also have to be shot off so the tip won't get caught in them when it falls.

Cancer Isolated By New Scanner

HALIFAX (CP) — A new examination technique which may help diagnose lung cancer in lymph glands of the chest has been developed by a young Halifax physician now working in Montreal.

Dr. Drew Bethune, 28, who is currently doing his surgical residency at Montreal General Hospital, was invited recently to present a paper on his invention to the American Academy of Thoracic Surgery, a distinguished association of chest surgeons.

His technique, endobronchial lymphoscintigraphy, uses tubes that have been in use for several years to reach the chest via the nasal passages.

Bethune invented a needle which can be inserted into such tubes to inject a small amount of radioactive material, or colloid, into lymph glands in the bronchial tree, an area that is difficult to x-ray.

After waiting several hours for the colloid to spread through the lymph glands, the physician places the patient in front of a scanning camera that photographs the area. On the resulting picture, non-cancerous or partially cancerous glands show traces of the colloid. Cancerous glands show no trace of it.

In the case of partially affected glands, there is no way short of surgery to be certain of the presence of cancer, Bethune said. However, his research to date had indicated certain patterns that indicate abnormalities.

Tortoise May be Slower But He Lives a Lot Longer

HELSINKI (Reuter) — How do you rate your chances of living longer than a turtle, an eel, a sturgeon or a pearl riverbed oyster?

According to a study made by the head of Helsinki Zoo, Dr. Ilkka Koivisto, you may not be in the same longevity bracket as one species of turtle — some, he believes, have reached the age of 200. But if you enjoy excellent health you might run the other three close, or even outlive them.

Koivisto, 46, has made a detailed study of the ages of animals, fish, birds, reptiles and amphibians.

In an article written for a book due to be published in the autumn, he lists the highest ages he has found recorded for them.

Among mammals man comes first, with a highest recorded age put at 130 (doubtful) and 110 (definite).

Then comes the elephant (75) and the whale. Koivisto does not specifically list whales but says privately that they apparently live to between 50 and 70.

He says turtles in Malagasy and the Galapagos Islands may live to be 200, although many experts doubt this.

The sturgeon and the river pearl oyster are both stated to have achieved the age of 100 while an eel has lived to be 88.

Koivisto says there are many ways of determining age.

Young birds show age in the color of their feathers. Fish show it in their scales and in annual changes in their bones.

The age of a dead hare may be revealed by weighing the lenses of its eyes.

The age of the male beaver can be assessed from the length of the pubic bone to which its sexual organs are attached.

A common way of telling age is to study the teeth of a dead animal.

The teeth are removed from the jawbone and cut across. The rings of enamel accumulated on them can then be counted under the microscope.

Koivisto and another Finnish expert some years ago studied the teeth of elk and found that they rarely live beyond 14 years of age in natural surroundings. He notes that all animals probably live longer in the protection of a zoo.

He gives the highest age attained by an elk in captivity as 40.

Teeth are vitally important because they are needed to prepare food for digestion.

Unlike elk, gnawing animals such as beavers keep renewing their teeth and these rodents may survive to a much greater age in natural surroundings.

Size, too, may be a rough clue to age.

Koivisto says there are several ways of stating age.

In some species the average age may be much lower than the highest age attained by an individual. Some wild ducks lose half their chicks before they are six months old.

This makes the average age of the species low, though some individual ducks may survive for many years.

Koivisto's official listings for the highest responsibly recorded ages include:

Mammals: Elephant 75, horse 55, hippopotamus 54, chimpanzee 51, rhinoceros 48, bear 47, Greenland seal 42, gorilla 40, orang outang 37, bison 33, baboon 33, leopard 31, lion 29, giraffe 28, large bats 25, small bats 15.

Birds: Cockatoo 69, raven 69, great horned owl 68, condor 65, ostrich 60, pelican 52, eagle 46, crane 43.

Reptiles: Alligator 62, blindworm 54, Nile crocodile 50, python 34, anaconda 32, cobra 29.

Fish: Sheat-fish 60, pike 50, carp 50, cod 25.

Amphibians: Giant salamander 60, toad 40, frog 20, water newt 18.

Invertebrates: river pearl oyster 100, lobster 50, crab 25, tarantula 17, ant 15.

Mice and humming birds rarely live for more than a few years.

Sleepy Driver Avoids Injury In Auto Crash

A youth driving in the 1900-block Crescent Friday fell asleep at the wheel and collided with a parked car triggering a chain reaction crash invloving two other parked vehicles.

Damage is estimated at more than $5,000, Oak Bay police said.

A police spokesman said the driver of the car, Terrance Brand, 17, of 2073 Crescent, was not injured in the mishap which occurred at 1:25 a.m.

The Subaru BRAT is a whole new kind of passenger car. You can shift from full-time front wheel drive to 4-wheel drive with the flick of a lever inside the car.

And if your idea of fun on the road is getting off the road, just shift into 4-wheel drive and head for the beach, the hills, or whatever part of the great outdoors you're into.

Subaru BRAT also delivers the kind of mileage most 4-wheel drive vehicles can't approach.

According to 1978 Transport Canada figures, the BRAT gets 69 highway and 50 city kilometers per gallon of regular gas.*

Many extras on other cars are standard on the BRAT, like AM push button radio. Tinted glass all round. Door-to-door carpeting. All-purpose radial tires. And of course our two outdoor bucket seats, a great place to park extra passengers.

The Subaru BRAT. Compact and easy to handle.

Adventists offering to assist blind

Seventh-day Adventist Churches across Canada will take up an offering this week for the Christian Record Braille Foundation, a program of providing spiritual and secular material to blind people.

Mrs. Kathleen Piper, lay activities director of the Victoria congregation, said that CRBF prints six braille, one large-print and four recorded magazines at its headquarters in Lincoln, Nebraska.

These are made available to blind and near-blind people in Canada and the U.S.

The institution also prints braille books, talking books and full-vision literature with braille and regular type for blind parents of normally-sighted children.

CRBF employs more than 100 district representatives in the United States and Canada, who visit about 50,000 blind people each year," Mrs. Piper said.

CRBF also runs a network of 34 camps for the blind. Now in its 11th year, the blind camp program provides young blind people from nine to 19 years with activities like "beeper ball," a form of baseball where the ball emits a sound; archery, where the bullseye has a balloon to pop, and touch and feel trails for nature study.

The camps are free to all blind children, regardless of race or creed.

John Reitor, western Canada area director, at 750 Falkirk Road, Kelowna, V1X 1R1, has information on the blind camp to be held at the Seventh-day Adventist campground at Hope.

Dates this year are July 23 to 30 and parents of blind children in this area are invited to contact the church for information.

Perspectives

By Rev. J. A. Davidson

Psychological principles and methods are now extensively used by the clergy. Many preachers get attention and acceptance by saying in a matter-of-fact voice, "As psychology teaches . . ." Much pastoral counselling now has a psychotherapeutic thrust. Perhaps we should rewrite some of our hymns—for instance:

"Psychotherapy pilot
me
Over life's tempestuous sea:
Unknown complexes in me are hid,
Rampaging ego and sneaky id.
Adjustment only comes from thee—
me."

But modern psychology has also provided new ways of challenging and criticizing religion. The most influential stance here is the psychoanalytic, the one that is derived from the work of Sigmund Freud. Widely accepted is Freud's description of religion as "the universal obsessional neurosis of humanity"—which is a fancy way of saying that if you are religicus you are sick-sick-sick. Some thinkers dismiss belief in God as merely a "psychological event"—and a rather discreditable one at that.

In his important book, The Future of an Illusion (published in 1928; now available as a paperback), Freud declared religious belief to be a harmful illusion rooted in irrational, unconscious forces. But, unlike many who have followed him, Freud was too self-critical and too scrupulous to put more weight on his principles than they can logically carry. In Freud's teaching on religion there is more tentativeness, more hesitancy, more acknowledged speculation, than either his friends or his enemies generally recognize.

Some who have been influenced by Freud say to Christian and Jewish believers, "You believe simply because you wish to believe. Your believing is a self-inflicted illusion, merely an exercise in wishful thinking." But surely the religious believer can apply the Freudian technique to disbelief and say to the critic, "Your belief about my belief, and your rejection of religion, is simply the fulfilment of your wishes, your own self-inflicted illusion."

Freudians have traced belief in God to a father-complex, and they put forth an impressive case. But surely an equally impressive case can be put that disbelief in God can be traced to that darling of the Freudians, the Oedipus complex, to a jealous desire to overthrow and supplant the father. This game of psychological ploy and counter-ploy leads to a stalemate—and the issue must be dealt with on other grounds.

It is significant that Freud, in his book, Civilization and Its Discontents (1929), said that in his earlier book, The Future of an Illusion, he was concerned "much less with the deepest sources of religion than with what the ordinary man understands about his religion." And with his customary honesty he urged his followers to pay respectful attention to the deeper sources of religious feelings which he had not attempted to probe. And we must always remember that Freud did not seriously study religion outside his consulting room.

Christian communicators to chart next two years

Christian communications specialists from 36 countries will gather at UBC Aug. 5-16 for meetings of the Central Committee of the World Association for Christian Communication (WACC).

The 56-member committee, representing 227 corporate members in 60 countries, will chart the direction of WACC's work in communication and media development for the next two years.

Members are mostly Protestant, Catholic and Orthodox churches and related communications organizations. Some secular organizations, such as the CBC, are also members.

WACC channels $2.2 million annually to media development projects, mostly in the Third World. It also helps plan and co-ordinate media work through a team of communications experts from many countries.

The central committee will discuss applications for funds and other assistance for projects in radio, television, publishing, audio-visuals, film, cassette, drama, dance and other folk media.

The WACC leaders will also consider a proposal to begin an international project on the church in satellite communication.

Canadian members of WACC include the United Church of Canada (UCC), the Presbyterian Church in Canada, the Baptist Convention of Ontario and Quebec, and the Salvation Army.

The Rev. Dr. Frank G. Brisbin of Toronto, Secretary of the UCC division of communication, is WACC secretary and Dr. Christopher O. Kolade of Lagos, Nigeria, former director-general of the Nigerian Broacasting Corporation, is president.

The WACC international headquarters in London is headed by the general secretary, Dr. Hans W. Florin of West Germany.

The small professional staff in London assists members around the world, and encourages them to develop programs appropriate to their areas. WACC-Europe helps sponsor a Christian television festival, while the North American broadcast section of WACC holds an annual conference. Training workshops are organized by other WACC regions.

WACC aid for the development of media projects emphsizes the why of Christian communication, not just the how. While technical equipment is essential, WACC is particularly concerned with helping groups to explore the philosophy and aims of Christian programs in communication.

Nearly the entire WACC budget goes toward media development projects in the Third World; the 1977 budget totalled $U.S.2.2 million.

Several WACC organizations help in media and commnications work abroad.

The Electronic Media Development Unit (EMDU) assists church-related projects in Asia, Africa, Latin America and the Middle East. Many of these projects involve ecumenical radio stations and production studios. EMDU-related organizations are increasing their involvement in group media such as audio-visuals, dance, drama and music.

EMDU emphasizes that Christian communieation efforts must serve all man's needs, since the gospel includes social, economic and political concerns as well as personal salvation. Grassroots communication, which involves individual participation, also has a high priority. About 50 per cent of WACC's annual budget is distributed to Third World projects through EMDU.

The Print Media Development Unit (PMDU) assists church-related publications such as books, magazines and newspapers in Asia, Africa, Latin America and the Middle East. Development of people in communication is the principal aim of PMDU's program. Priority is given to print media development among tribal groups in countries such as India.

A Periodicals Development Program operates alongside PMDU to encourage publications which speak with a prophetic but minority voice in Third World countries. About 40 per cent of WACC's annual budget will be distributed to Thrid World projects for literature and periodical development.

The mandate of the Commission on Communication Education (CCE) includes the development of training programs for communicators. Assistance is given to WACC regions for training workshops and in helping them to keep up with new developments in the communication field.

CCE also administers a scholarship program for communication students who come to the U.K. and other countries for additional training.

The Group Media Decvelopment Committee (GMDC), the newest department in WACC, was formed at the Central Committee meetings in Malta in May, 1976. GMDC is developing a program in the 'small media' which will complement WACC work in mass media. Group media include film, cassettes, filmstrips, posters, puppets, drama, dance and various folk media.

The WACC publishes a quarterly journal which discusses issues facing Christian communicators. It includes reports on the work of WACC members as well as articles on developments in the field of communication.

A newsletter, Action, is published 10 times a year. It carries shorter news items and features on media work around the world.

Both Action and the WACC Journal reflect WACC's commitment to communication development in the Third World.

WACC members receive Action and the WACC Journal as part of their membership privileges. Non-members may subscribe to Action for $5 U.S. and to the WACC Journal for $10 U.S. These annual subscriptions may be paid in any negotiable currency.

For further membership information contact the WACC Membership Secretary, 122 King's Road, London, SW34TR, England, phone (01) 589-1484. Cable address is WACC London SW3.

Baptist leader carries heavy burden

By NOEL OSMENT

Cora Sparrowk . . .religion and tennis

Cora Sparrowk, president of the American Baptist Churches in the U.S.A., has church interests extending far beyond U.S. boundaries.

The church's many overseas mission have been one of her main concerns during her lifelong involvement with the church, she said in an interview.

Over the years she and her husband, John, a retired land developer who now raises cattle, have worked to raise funds for missions and encourage young people to become missionaries.

"Two families from our church went out as missonaries and we have followed what has happened to them with interest," she said.

Cora has been working in U.S. church posts for more than 16 years, and for the last two years has served as president of the American Baptist Board of International Ministries. She has also been active on the national level with Church Women United. Her work with the two groups has taken her to many parts of the world to visit missions and meet with other church people.

These experiences have set one of her presidential goals for her.

"I feel a real burden to sensitize people to the economic problems around the world," said Mrs. Sparrowk, who has observed the poverty of Africa and Asia. "I can understand the culture shock some missionaries experience when they come back here and see the abundance in this country."

Mrs. Sparrowk believes the greatest challenges facing the church today are the breakdown of the family, divorce and the erosion of moral values.

"The church has the responsibility to speak out—to sensitize people as to what is going on. There must be an inner change in the life of people to bring about changes. The church must be evangelical as well as being involved in social concerns," she said.

Young people, she believes, particularly need this evangelical message, as evidenced by their searching which frequently lead them to cults.

She said young people need the satisfaction of being involved in worthwhile endeavors and cited the experience of a young man she knew who went to Thailand to work as a medical missionary in small mountain villages.

"It was a life-changing experience for him," she said.

Thus, she is supportive of church programs which take groups of youths to other countries to work on certain projects.

She said that the American Baptist Church is no different from many others in that it is faced with the problem of maintaining membership.

The Sparrowks have a few alternatives of their own. Until her favorite horse died a few years ago Cora enjoyed riding on the couple's ranch in Ione (in the Mother Lode country about 40 miles from Sacramento, Calif.) She now plays tennis with her husband.

The American Baptist Churches in the U.S.A., originally known as Northern Baptist Churches, are composed of 6,500 congregations and about 1.6 million members.

Church short of ministers

The United Church faces a shortage of ministers this year, the United Church Observer reported in its June issue.

The national vacancy was 149 but officials felt only 49 of those were cause for concern. According to Rev. John Staples of the division of ministry, personnel and education, a vacancy rate of 100 allows for smooth movement of clergy to and from churches. With fewer vacancies, ministers could have trouble finding new jobs when they wanted to move.

The shortage is not expected to ease much before 1987.

Staples has produced a study that indicates the need for at least another 20 new ministers each year until then, just to fill vacancies left by retirements or deaths of active ministers, the Observer reports.

If the United Church is to avoid a serious shortage of pastoral ministers, more active recruiting must go on in the local congregation, Staples says.

Sunday's park service under Central Baptist

The gospel service for Sunday evening in Beacon Hill Park will be at Cameron bandshell at 7 p.m.

Central Baptist Church will be in charge of this seventh in a series of services sponsored by Park Services Interdenominational, with Rev. Robert Holmes giving the gospel message.

He will be supported by his congregation which includes a considerable number of young people.

The musical part of the program will feature selections by The Summer Chorale, a singing group of 20 young women conducted by Tom McRae, with Nancy Holmes as accompanist, vocal solos by Waldy Krahn, and numbers by a trio who will also present a pre-service concert at 6:45 p.m.

Nancy Holmes will lead the congregational singing, and Tom McRae will be master of ceremonies.

Beracah hosting musical ministry

Beracah Bible Church, 4516 W. Saanich Road (Royal Oak), will host the musical-evangelistic ministry of Dan and Jeanne Williams the week of July 23-30 at 7 o'clock each evening.

Known as The Word and Music, this unique group, based in Pittson, Pa., presents the Gospel of Jesus Christ through the blending of classical and evangelistic music. The talented trio seeks to give an alternative musical ministry to the cheap, sensual, and sensational gospel music so prevalent today.

Accompanied by Mrs. Norma Smith, Dan and Jeanne Williams present tenor and soprano solos, duets, and piano solos.

The ministry of The Word and Music is based on free will offerings. No tickets are sold and seats are available only on a first come, first serve basis. Further information may be obtained from Rev. Foy Spivey, phone 474-1545.

CHURCH CHRONICLES

Right Rev. W.G. Burch, former bishop of Edmonton, Alberta, will be guest speaker Sunday at St. John's Anglican Church, 1611 Quadra, at the 9:30 and 11 a.m. services.

This Sunday is designated "Alberta Sunday" in the Sundays of the Provinces series of services at the church.

As part of the idea of welcoming friends from neighboring provinces, a coffee hour will be held at 10:30 a.m. in the garden court beside the church.

Soprano Norma Selwood, and Norman Hurrle accompanist, will be featured in the 1978 Music in the Cathedral series today at 4 p.m. in Christ Church Cathedral, Quadra and Burdett.

The Luther Court Community Club has been given a grant of $33,465 by the federal New Horizons program to establish an activity and recreation centre for the residents of Luther Court and other elderly people living in the area near Cedar Hill Cross Road.

Luther Court, a housing complex that will include personal-care beds, is nearing completion on a site adjoining the Lutheran Church of the Cross.

The activity program will include music, arts and crafts, photography, films, carpentry and games.

James Bay United Church parishioners in need of pastoral care may call on either of two ministers during the absence of the James Bay minister. Pastoral care where needed will be given by Rev. Frank Baldock of Cordova Bay United, Phone 658—8505, or by Rev. Russ Vickers of Gordon Head United, Phone 477—6505 or 477—0412.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Sunday, July 23
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Activity tends to centre around home situation. Open secret is discussed. Cancer, Capricorn figure prominently. Visit to hospital aids in cheering one who feels neglected. You are able to locate something of value — which had been misplaced.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Social activity is spotlighted. Humor, versatility become twin allies. Forces tend to be diversified. Leave fine points, details for another time. Grasp overall view, meanings. Gemini, Sagittarius individuals are part of scenario.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Reach up — there will be a helping hand. One who seemed cold, calculating will display interest in your welfare. Aquarius, Pisces persons figure in scenario — so does the number 6. Diet, gifts, major domestic move or adjustment — these also command portion of spotlight.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Gain long-range view; your senses are attuned to what can occur. Travel, change, gain through reading and writing are indicated. Gemini, Sagittarius figure prominently. Keep lines of communication open — someone is going to send a signal. It will amount to a green light.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Discuss finances with partner or mate; home repairs, decorating, addition of luxury items, art objects rank high on agenda. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio persons figure prominently. The number 6 could turn up more times than by mere coincidence.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Accent on contracts, legal arrangements, listening to those with views opposing your own. Avoid self-deception; do more than in past to define terms, rights, permissions. Lie low, be shrewd and discreet. let others reveal their plans, hopes, aspirations.

LIBRA (Aug. 23-Oct. 22): Practical matters dominate. You've asked for more money, authority and responsibility. You might find them at your doorstep! Bring priorities into focus. Deal with Cancer, Capricorn persons. Get down to business. Older individual will lend benefit of experience.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Accent creativity. Your style, message get across in meaningful manner. You make commitments — emotional, artistic, financial. Aries, Libra figure in scenario. Affair of heart could dominate. Relationship tested — it endures or snaps, with no middle ground.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Study Scorpio message. You are in midst of dynamic transactions, negotiations. Act in creative, independent manner. Leo, Aquarius persons figure prominently. You make new contact which could lead to "something big."

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Relatives, home environment dominate. Short trip, visit, unusual requests, mail also command attention. Another Capricorn — and a Cancer — play key roles. If adaptable, you turn apparent setback into victory.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): One whose claims are ubiquitous should be viewed with skepticism. Applies especially when it comes to cash outlay — hold tight to possessions, valuables. Concentrate efforts. Don't dilute quality by trying to be everywhere at once.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You pack a wallop and today you might prove it. Cycle is high; don't back down from principles. Take initiative. Lead rather than follow. Start project, make personal appearances. You are capable of breaking free from restrictions.

IF JULY 23 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY your are attractive, analytical, somewhat "flashy," fond of travel, writing and being in the spotlight. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons play important roles in your life. You make new start in new direction in September. The year has featured added independence, pioneering projects, a chance to right wrongs of the past — and to fall in love. You are capable of expressing yourself via acting, writing. You are lively and possess great curiosity. You find ideas fascinating and you can live by your wits.

Monday July 24

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Adaptability is another plus; Moon cycle is high, judgment, hunches are on the beam. Personality shines; popularity surges upwards. Wear bright colors, be conspicuous by your presence. Take the lead. Start something!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your strength is greater than may now be apparent on surface. What seems a "prison" is merely a temporary restriction. Cycle is high; you win, land on your feet, gain illumination, receive a "revelation."

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Accent on desire, willingness to make wishes come true. Analyze, draw conclusons based on factual data. Your personal magnetism soars — members of opposit sex are drawn to you. Yes, vital changes are due and good for you!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You are able now to mobilize, to make an assault on "obstacle courses." Important conference with family member is likely to be on agenda. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio persons figure prominently.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Abstract matters, including art, command attention. Symbols will reveal realities. Be alert, perceptive, open to information from unorthodox sources. Pisces, Virgo and the number 7 figure prominently. Long-distance call or message aids in regaining sense of direction.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): What concerns you is serious. Know it and prepare accordingly. Money and love are involved. Reject the superficial; dig beneath surface indications. Partner, mate make inquiries — security, survival from essence.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your personality, desires, aims and objective get across. Partner or mate figures prominently. Conclusion of legal transaction commands attention. Let others have their say. You gain plenty now by "holding your fire."

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): New approach to work procedures brings most constructive results. Leo, Aquarius figure in scenario. One who performs a service requests a "new deal." Consider it. Be fair, but refuse to be intimidated.

SAGGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Intuition works actively—creative resources surge forward. Change, speculation, variety are part of scenario. Children, members of opposit sex, your own creative style all crowd scenario. Aquarius, Cancer persons are likely to play key roles.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Foundation is solid, despite increased activity, diversions. Element of luck or timing rides with you. Cheerful atmosphere at social function lifts spirits. Gemini, Sagittarius persons figure in scenario.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Obtain valid hint from Capricorn message. You locate "escape hatch." You are able to utilize knowledge. You receive accolade from neighbor or relative. Your message gets across in meaningful manner. Yes, the trip is necessary.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Accent on personal possessions, collections, valuables, income. You gain through change, being able to piece together bits of information. You will come up with complete story. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons are a part of scenario.

IF JULY 24 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are musical, have a "sweet tooth" and a taste for art and luxury. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio persons play key roles in your life. You start something new, challenging in August. The question of home, or where to live, could concern you during 1978. You are attractive, spoiled by the opposite sex, accustomed to having your own way. You also are creative, sensitive and loyal.

Sweeteners Not to Blame?

CHICAGO (Reuter) — A research report from Johns Hopkins University says artificial sweeteners in amounts now consumed do not cause cancer in humans.

The report, to be published in the July 28 issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association, is based on interviews with 519 persons in Baltimore who had bladder cancer.

It concludes that those who use artificial sweeteners, including diet soft drinks, are no more likely to develop bladder cancer than those who do not.

Dr. Irving Kessler, who conducted the study, says: "Neither saccharin nor cyclamate is likely to be carcinogenic in man, at least at the moderate dietary ingestion levels reported by the patient sample."

Cyclamate was banned as an artificial sweetener in the U.S. in 1970 on the basis of cancer-causing effects in laboratory animals.

Saccharin was withdrawn from the list of safe products in 1972, and the Food and Drug Administration later proposed an outright ban on its use. But last year Congress ordered an 18-month postponement of the ban pending new scientific studies.

The Federal Drug Administration said in April, 1977, that "a moderate use of saccharin, the amount present in one large diet soft drink, if ingested daily over a lifetime by every American, might lead to 1,200 additional cases of bladder cancer per year."

In the Johns Hopkins study, surviving bladder cancer patients were questioned on their intake of table sweeteners, diet beverages and diet foods as well as total intake in all forms.

Exposure to artifically sweetened beverages of all kinds was about the same in patients and controls of both sexes, the report says.

"The apparent absence of an association between total artificial sweetener use and bladder cancer suggests that neither saccharin nor cyclamate in physiological dosages is carcinogenic to man," Kessler concludes.

Tourism Top World Activity By 2000?

UNITED NATIONS (Reuter) — Tourism could become the most important single economic activity in the world by the year 2000, according to an analysis cited in a United Nations report just published.

The document, prepared by the World Tourism Organization, said it was perhaps too optimistic to endorse the assertion of some economic analzsts that coutries as a whole already spend more on tourism than on armaments.

But the fact that tourism was "perhaps the only economic sector in the world that showed continued growth in the course of the current recession seems to lend credence to optimism," it said.

Factors in the tourism boom included population growth, shorter working hours, longer paid holidays and an increased number of young people travelling.

The UN agency said tourism should be planned nationally and internationally.

The report was prepared for the UN Economic and Social Council and as a document for the World Conference on Tourism to be held in 1980.

"The problem of the future is not one of tourism consumption and of stimulating demand, but one of organizing supply and marketing," according to the report.

"Investments, both public and private, will be necessary for this purpose. Loans will be required but loans of a different conception from those granted to other industrial sectors, which are based on exclusively economic criteria. Tourism must benefit from loans because of its economic importance, but also in consideration of its social and cultural impact."

Referring to the adverse effects of tourism, condemned by some as a major cause of pollution and destroyer of the environment, the World Tourism Organization said these were largely attributable to the absence of state intervention.

States must assume responsibility for the harmonious development of tourism through appropriate legislation and regulations, the report said.

Sharing the international tourism bill was bound to enter sooner or later into the continuing North-South economic dialogue, the report said, adding: "The truism that tourism follows the sun has also brought the realization that where there is the most sun there is often the most poverty."

$5.3M In Grants For B.C.

Two Greater Victoria senior citizen groups were among 24 organizations in B.C. sharing in $5.3 million in grants.

The Sooke Elderly Citizens Housing Society received a $40,000 capital grant to assist the construction of a six-unit wing for senior citizens.

And an additional grant of $31,400 was given to the Victoria Senior Citizens Housing Society to help build 99 new units. The extra funds increases to $876,000 the total granted by the province to the project.

The city of Vancouver received the largest grant — $543,000 for roadwork.

Weddings

Foulger — May

On June 10, 1978, at 7 p.m., St. Luke's Anglican Church was the scene of a lovely summer wedding, joyfully uniting in marriage Leanne Nesta, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Fredrick May, Victoria, B.C., and Mr. Neil Grant Foulger, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold S. Foulger, Victoria, B.C. The double-ring ceremony was officiated by Rev. D. Edward F. Moulden.

Given in marriage by her father, the petite bride wore an exquisite gown of delustered satin, trimmed with Guipure lace at the neckline and around the soft flowing skirt, which fell entrain. Her headdress of Guipure lace held her fingertip veil. An opal pendant and earrings, gift from the groom, complemented her gown. Leanne carried a bouquet of yellow roses and white carnations. The maid of honour, Miss Sherry Zukiwsky, and bridesmaid Miss Heather Winters wore identical gowns of yellow delustered satin, and carried bouquets of white daisies. The mother of the bride chose a gown of turquoise chiffon, featuring cape sleeves, and wore a corsage of white gardenias. The groom's mother wore a gown of beige chiffon complemented by a corsage of Belinda roses. Mr. Ray Lavallee attended as best man, and the ushers were Mr. Glen Foulger, brother of the groom, and Mr. David May, brother of the bride.

A reception was held at the Queen Victoria Inn, where the toast to the bride was proposed by Mr. Bill Cairney of Port Alberni. Mr. Gerry Hallier of Victoria was the master of ceremonies. For her going away outfit, the bride made a tailored suit of yellow gabardine, and wore a corsage of yellow roses.

After a honeymoon trip along the Oregon Coast, the happy couple now reside in Victoria.

Russell — Callinan

St. Matthias Church, Victoria, was the scene of a pretty wedding June 24, 1978, when Miss Mona Helen Callinan became the bride of Mr. James Russell, both of Victoria. Canon Greenhalgh officiated at the ceremony.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother-in-law, Mr. William Irving Kirkland. Diane Hall was soloist and Frances Pollet organist. The bride wore a floor length gown of pale blue chiffon. Her shoulder length veil of tulle was caught into a tiara, and she carried a bouquet of pink carnations. She wore a borrowed gold diamond set heart pendant. The bride's sister, Mrs. Minnie Kirkland, as matron of honour, wore a floor length gown of beige, and carried gold mums. Maid of honour Miss Cathy Cuthbert wore a floor length gown of pale green and carried yellow mums. Bridesmaid Miss Sylvia Kirkland, niece of the bride, wore a floor length gown of off-white, and carried mauve mums; flower girl Miss Lorena Kirby, granddaughter of the groom, wore a floor length gown in pale pink, flowers to match. Best man was Mr. Harry McAllister, brother-in-law to the groom. Ushers were Mr. William E. Farmer and Mr. Nick Kirby, son-in-law of the groom.

A reception was held at St. Matthias Church Hall. The bride's table was decorated with pink roses, candles, and centred with a 3-layer cake. Mr. Harry McAllister proposed the toast to the bride. Guests came from all over Vancouver and Up—Island. For going away, the bride chose a pale blue outfit, white accessories and white orchid corsage for their honeymoon trip to the Sunshine Coast.

Tibbits — Stephens

Pastor Norman B. Archer officiated at the double-ring ceremony in Emmanuel Baptist Church on June 24, 1978, at 1 p.m., when Darlene Edith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Stephens exchanged wedding vows with Daniel Arthur Tibbits, son of Mrs. Jean Tibbits.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father, and was given in marriage by both parents. The bride wore an elegant wedding gown of silk jersey with a medieval neckline. The waist of the fitted bodice featured a softly folded cummerbund with a row of self covered buttons. The sleeves were long. A fingertip veil of silk illusion lace misted from a lace headpiece embroidered with pearls. Her bouquet of white gladiolas and yellow rosebuds completed the picture. The maid of honour, sister of the bride, Brenda Stephens, and bridesmaids Cindy and Gail Tibbits, sisters of the groom, were in identical gowns of soft green floral polyester. Each wore a hat trimmed with matching ribbon and carried a bouquet of white daisies with yellow centres and baby's breath. The groom was attired in a fashionable blue tuxedo. The best man was Mr. Cal Nault; Mr. Dave Parkinson and Mr. Les Richardson were ushers. All wore blue tuxedos with blue carnations complementing their lapels.

The reception was held in the garden at the Olde England Inn. Mr. Ron Morgan proposed the toast to the bride. Out of town guests included Mr. and Mrs. M. Kitson, Lakehurst, Ont., grandparents of the groom; Mr. and Mrs. R. Bull, Port Coquitlam, grandparents of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Derek McGee, Grande Prairie, Alberta, sister and brother-in-law of the groom and nieces Cathy and Andrea; Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Bull, great uncle and aunt of the bride, Vancouver, B.C.; Mr. and Mrs. Len Ford, Clifford, Raymond and Linda, North Vancouver, B.C.; Mr. and Mrs. Norman Hygh, Reece, Lesa and Steven, Nanaimo, B.C.

After a honeymoon on Piers Island, Dan and Darlene are now residing in Victoria.

YOUR CITY WATCHDOG REport No. 67. Congratulations and many thanks go to all those persons responsible for bringing the extra 90 seat rail passenger car to Vancouver Island. A special thanks to Vancouver Islanders who in spite of great inconvenience in recent months have continued to support the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway employees committee in their efforts to provide better train service. Beause of a proposed special historic trip to commemorate the last spike driven by John A. McDonald at Cliffside 92 years ago the trip Your City Watchdog proposed for August 6th has been postponed. There will be a public hearing at City Hall on Thursday, July 27, at 7:30 p.m. regarding rezoning of property on Burdett Ave. This hearing will be establishing a new type of zoning to be known as "RK Zone Medium Density Attached Dwelling District" and all city taxpaying homeowners should attend. If you wish further information regarding city matters, please continue to phone 383-6259, Yoyr City's Watchdog, C. J. Richards.
Postscript: Your City's Watchdog feels that John Cooper who chaired the employees SAVE THE ESQUIMALT & NANAIMO Committee can be compared with the successful BC Hydro fighter Pat Codyre.
Post-postscript: Thank you Lyle Kahl for attending the Save the Esquimalt & Nanaimo Committee meeting held in Duncan July 20th.

AQUARIAN GENTLEMAN, INtelligent, mature, 35, 5'7", 160, Irish-Scotch, vegetarian, nonsmoker, lite social drinker single independent, desire "sincere friendship", interests: health foods, herbal medicines, astrology, solar and bio-cosmic energy, E.S.P., travel, boating, flying, plus many more. Wish communications with petite, attractive, intelligent lady, 18-50 (skin color immaterial), financially independent, free to travel and similar interests. A. E. Newton Ltd. 9381 Ardmore OPEN HOUSE SAT.-SUN. 2-5 By Contractor

An exciting west coast home professionally designed and engineered in a beautiful country setting of tall trees and ocean views. The tiled foyer adds to the open design of the generous sunken living room with its feature fireplace and sloping cedar ceiling.
A formal dining room, with french doors, leads to an exterior patio and adjoins the efficient kitchen with a sunshine ceiling, custom oak cabinets and built-in appliances.
Three distinctive bathrooms: one off the luxurious master bedroom, with walk-in closets, sunken tub, separate shower, skylights and mirrors galore.
A large family room has its own cedar sundeck and a private den is oak panelled in the old tradition. The finishing touches — floors, walls, fixtures — are all beyond compare.

Fourth Year of Freeze Demanded in U.K. Pay

By BERNARD NOSSITER
Washington Post

LONDON — In a move that will be closely watched by the Carter administration (and the Canadian government), Britain's Labor government Friday called for a fourth consecutive year of specific curbs on pay demands.

Denis Healey, the chancellor of the exchequer, announced that the goal for the next 12 months is wage increases averaging 5 per cent — just half the target of the past year.

With a possible general election in October and almost certainly no later than next spring, the likelihood of pay deals not far above the target is good. Unions here are the backbone of the Labor Party. Their leaders will not want to wreck the government's electoral hopes.

As in the past three years, the pay program is largely voluntary. It depends essentially on the assent of union leaders and their members.

Up to now, this incomes policy has been the Labor goverment's most conspicuous success. It has played a major part in bringing inflation down from a terrifying 30 per cent to the current rate of 7.4 per cent.

Indeed, three years ago, prices here were spiraling upward so rapidly that some commentators feared Britain's stable democracy was in danger of going under. Now, with inflation at the average European level, such talk has died away.

Energy Team Fights On

Despite insufficient funds, six Greater Victoria residents have decided to continue working on an alternative energy technology demonstration project.

"We have decided to keep going in the hope that somewhere along the line we can obtain an additional $9,000 needed to complete our work," said project leader Derrick Mallard, president of the Citizens Association to Save the Environment (C.A.S.E.).

The federal energy, mines and resources department donated $14,759 towards the project which is to show how solar and wind energy can be used in Greater Victoria.

But the money barely covers the salaries of the reseach team. Additional money is needed to construct two windmill generators and two solar collectors on which the project hinges.

Mallard said he was hopeful that private donations would enable the working units to be completed by the mid-September deadline.

"But we won't have the $5,000 needed for total instrument monitoring, a very vital phase of the project," he said.

The environmentalist applied to the Capital Regional district and municipalities for grants but with the exception of North Saanich, which gave a $250 grant, was rejected outright.

Mallard said he found it ironic that world leaders were stressing the need to conserve energy, "yet our local politicians continue burying their heads in the sand."

Tsunami - Exotic Name for a Killer

By WALTER SULLIVAN
New York Times

HONOLULU — On June 12 at 10:06 p.m. Hawaiian time, sudden slippage beneath the Pacific floor 60 miles east of the Japanese city of Sendai in Japan sent tremors around the world. Buildings in Sendai collapsed, killing 21 persons and injuring 350. Subways in Tokyo screeched to a halt.

Joseph Zebro was on duty at the Pacific Tsunami warning Centre, operated here on behalf of 14 Pacific coastal and island nations. In seven minutes, arrival of the first pressure waves started recording needles on seismographs sweeping from side to side.

Fourteen minutes later, the first shear waves — so named because they move sideways, relative to the direction of travel — indicated that a major earthquake had occurred.

Zebro summoned Dr. Eddie Bernard, the station chief, from his nearby home. Teletypes linking the centre to 31 seismic stations around the Pacific began to chatter, helping pinpoint the site.

Dr. Bernard decided to declare a "tsunami watch" and teletype tape was punched, outlining the strategy for the far-flung stations. Of the 50 tide gauges of the system, three were in Japan. The two nearest were told to watch for ominous changes in water depths.

Dr. Bernard and his colleagues were mindful of what happened when, in 1896, a quake occurred in the same area. It was a holiday and the beaches were crowded; the sea receded, exposing bottom never before visible, then returned with a vengeance in a tsunami, or tidal wave, that mounted to a height of 100 feet. More than 27,000 lives were lost.

Now, the tide station nearest the recent quake reported only a six-inch change in sea level, and other stations detected no change. Forty-two minutes after the watch was proclaimed, it was cancelled.

In Hawaii, telephone books have maps of areas designated for evacuation under such circumstances. On the island of Hawaii, this also calls for moving residents above the ninth stories of high-rise buildings and tourist hotels.

Tsunamis were long called "tidal waves," but the term is in disrepute because they are unrelated to tides, nor do they behave as do conventional waves.

While the tsunami warning system here has been in operation for 30 years, it still cannot make predictions with sufficient reliabiltiy to assure public response. More than two dozen warnings have been issued here and by regional stations in Alaska, but only five have been followed by damaging tsunamis.

In 1960, although a warning was issued six hours in advance, many people remained in low-lying sections of Hilo, the Hawaiian port city. The area was devastated by successive waves and 61 persons died. Yet, because of the special properties of such waves, they were not felt aboard a freighter offshore.

Steps being taken to bring about major improvements in forecast reliability include a Soviet-American program of water pressure observations from the sea floor, development of satellite links to speed up the collection of data, and computer programs for rapid data analysis.

In the Soviet-American program, nine pressure sensors developed by Dr. Robert Harvey and his colleagues at the University of Hawaii have been dropped off the Soviet research ship Valerian Uryvaev along the coasts of Sakhalin and the Kurile Islands. They remained there for three-week periods, recording pressure variations, then popped to the surface automatically.

In two such tests in 1975 no observable tsunamis occurred, but the devices recorded such effects as tides and rises in sea levels as low-air-pressue zones of two typhoons swept past. In August and September, the project is to be repeated, with 11 sensors capable of recording sea depth changes to a fraction of an inch.

Such subtle changes can be detected, Dr. Harvey explains, because wind waves are cancelled out. "The deep ocean is a beautiful filter," he says. The observations will extend as far south as Guam.

Many tide gauges in the tsunami system are not always manned, and their communications links are unreliable. Only one, at San Diego, is linked to the Hawaii centre via satellite, in a roundabout route. Last week funds became available from the U.S. National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration to install a satellite link from a pressure gauge in 2,000 feet of water off Wake Island.

As yet, Harvey points out, no tsunami has been recorded in the deep sea. Such a wave in deep water may be 100 miles long and only a few inches high, travelling at 600 miles an hour.

Water in the wave moves forward a few hundred yards for a half hour or so, then back again. The water in this movement, however, is two or more miles deep. When the wave reaches shoaling bottom, its height increases and its speed slows.

Only in special circumstances, such as a narrowing channel, does it form a steep wave front. To record the passage of such waves, sea-floor recorders are to be connected to one of six weather buoys anchored in the Gulf of Alaska.

Dr. Harold Loomis, leader of the joint tsunami research project here, believes that seismology and computers' capabilities are at a stage at which data from a quake can be analyzed more rapidly. As a first step toward more rapid analysis, a computer has been installed at the centre here.

SEISMOGRAPH readings from the main island of Hawaii are checked by Dr. Eddie Bernard, the scientist in charge of the Pacific Tsunami Warning Center at Ewa Beach.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — Joe Tilem, the mayor of Beverly Hills, bounded down the spiral staircase from the bedroom suite and looked amazed. "Nine hundred mil," he said. "That's what they said the family is worth, 900 mil — $900 million. They're very open about it."

The mayor was not the only one amazed when the Sheik of Araby opened his mansion here to his neighbors.

To be precise, the Sheik wasn't there, but his father, Dr. Sheik Mohamed Shansuddin al-Fassi, who bought the home for his son, was there. And after a long evening of music, dancing, drinking and dining, it appeared he had begun to make peace with Beverly Hills.

Since his 23-year-old son, Sheik Mohammed S.A. al-Fassi, and his 19-year-old daughter-in-law moved into and began redecorating the 38-room house on Sunset Boulevard early this year, it has become a something of a landmark.

The family painted the 61-year-old white mansion lime green, placed plastic flowers in Romanesque urns facing Sunset Boulevard and painted white statues with skin tones and colors. Tilem and other city officials said they were deluged with complaints, and traffic jams of sightseers became a daily problem near the house.

Several months ago, the family said that once the decorating was completed, they would invite in some neighbors to see the place. Saturday night the neighbors came, and long-time Beverly Hills dwellers could not remember any large party that had drawn such a large number of acceptances.

For more than three hours, Cadillacs, Rolls-Royces, Ferraris, Mercedeses, Jaguars and lesser automobiles paraded onto the grounds of the mansion; not all of Beverly Hills was there, but more than 600 came.

Many were the anonymous millionaires of this city, curious to see the controversial home of a near-billionaire; others were such familiar show people as Pat Boone, Fred MacMurray, Lloyd Bridges and Cornell Wilde.

There were three bars, 30 pounds of iced Iranian caviar, huge Maine lobsters, mounds of hot and cold prawns, barbecued shish kebab, mousse, a table of Middle Eastern dishes, Robert Mondavi cabarnet sauvignon and Johannesburg riesling, and Schramsberg blanc moir champagne.

The elder sheik paid $2.4 million for the house. In a friendly news conference in his son's bedroom — the one next to the $60,000 master bathroom which had a mirrored ceiling and an elevated velvet-covered circular bed that rotated — he said the total investment in the house was about $7 million.

After parking attendants took their cars, the first thing that most of the visitors did was bypass the bars and outdoor buffets and head for the house's interior to check out reports about bizarre decorative touches.

At one end of the first floor was the billiard room, with red billiard tables, red carpet, red velvet scimitars on the walls and a red-draped ceiling that gave the room the appearance of a tent.

This room was adjacent to the smaller of two living rooms. Here the dominant color was green. There were revolving motorized crystal chandeliers and a full-sized model of a stuffed animal in one corner.

Off this room was the young wife's study, decorated by European and Middle Eastern art, her high school graduation diploma and an antique desk that an Arab host in a tuxedo said was identical to one used by a king of Spain.

The main living room was a large space with eclectic furnishings, including Arabian-motif paintings, batches of lions and leopards and ceiling frescoes painted with Arabian scenes. Off this room was the smaller of two dining rooms, in which the decorations included plastic three-dimensional photographs of nude omen wearing veils over their faces, and a painting on black velvet of the San Francisco Bay bridge.

The main dining room — oval with a table and 22 chairs, brilliantly painted frescoes and more paintings of nude women — was the final major room on the first floor. It was a peace-and-quiet room shaped like the interior of a mosque, with an organ in the centre and a floor lamp shaped like a woman.

In the basement there was a large discotheque containing a stunning light-and-audio system said to have cost the family $100,000.

There were rumors at the party that the younger sheik had run off with a girl whom he had met on Sunset Boulevard, another that he had so embarrassed his father that he had been sent off to one of the three palaces in Saudi Arabia. His father would say only that the son was "away on business."

The father, who is a member of the Saudi Arabian royal family and owns a trading company, arrived about 7 p.m. in a yellow, oversized limousine behind two motorcycle policemen. He was wearing a white raw-silk suit, a dark blue shirt and a white tie that reminded some of his guests of Chicago in the Prohibition era.

Many of his neighbors who got to meet him — and many could not because of the press of the crowds — said afterward that they had found him a warm, friendly man who seemed to mean it when he said he did not want to offend his neighbors.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Two persons charged with possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking and trafficking in marijuana elected trial by judge without jury and were remanded to Aug. 3 to fix a preliminary hearing date when they appeared in Victoria provincial court Friday before Judge Blake Allan.

Clifford Ellis, 30, and Tina Yvonne Ellis, 22, both of 1706 Newton Street, were jointly charged with the two offences and were also charged separately with the same offences as well as with simple possession of marijuana.

"You're running close to getting a long sentence," Allan warned a 34-year-old man before handing out fines totalling $200.

Dale Elliot Thompson, 2033 Weiler Avenue, pleaded guilty to two counts of false pretences.

Crown counsel Richard Anthony told the court Thompson wrote cheques for $72.51 and $128.36 to Woolco on April 10 and 11 with only $1.68 in his bank account at the time. Anthony also said Thompson was convicted of four counts of false pretences in Victoria on Sept. 28, 1976, and was fined $200 on each count.

Defence counsel James Robertson said Thompson was the father of five children ranging in age from seven to 16 and that the smaller cheque was for two sleeping bags and air mattresses for his children and the larger cheque for a portable television, also for his family.

Allan also placed Thompson on 12 months' probation, and ordered him to attend any Drug and Alcohol Rehabilitation Society counselling as directed by his probation officer and to make restitution for the full amount to Woolco within four months.

A 19-year-old mother on welfare was given a conditional discharge and six months' probation after pleading guilty to writing a worthless cheque for $94.13 to K-Mart on April 17.

Leigh Ann Dudman, 361 Island Highway, entered a guilty plea to a charge of false pretences and Anthony informed the court the cheque was written when the account was overdrawn by 65 cents.

In asking for the discharge, defence counsel Morry Levin said his client received $165 a month on welfare and that the items purchased with the worthless cheque were for her 1½-year-old son. Levin also said the woman broke up with her common-law husband of 2½ years over the incident.

She was placed on six months probation and ordered to make restitution.

Samuel Alexander, 31, of 1123 Goldstream Avenue, was fined a total of $800 after changing his plea to guilty on charges of impaired driving and refusing a breath test demand made by Colwood RCMP on Dec. 5.

Anthony said Alexander was stopped by police after he pulled off Sooke Road near Kangaroo Road to let a following police vehicle go by.

After the demand for a breath sample was made by police, Anthony stated, Alexander refused because he said he was framed in a previous charge.

Allan imposed a $500 fine on the impaired driving charge and a $300 fine on the refusal to take the breath test.

Bail Request Queried

Bail hearing for one of 15 men accused of conspiracy to import marijuana was adjourned without comment in Victoria provincial court Friday but a second hearing adjournment request prompted comment by Judge Blake Allan.

Robert Sherman Miller, 33, of Vancouver, who had been remanded in custody to Tuesday, was the first to appear Friday. Defence counsel Peter Hart of Vancouver sought an adjournment back to the first date and this was granted.

The second person to appear, Neil Maxwell Kennedy, 26, of Toronto, who choose trial by judge and jury earlier this week, was originally to appear next week for bail hearing but he came into court Wednesday before Allan who granted a defence request for an adjournment to Friday.

When the case was called Friday, defence counsel Josiah Wood of Vancouver asked that it be adjourned to Monday because he wanted it dealt with by Judge Fred Green because that judge had heard a number of bail applications earlier and was familiar with the case.

Judge Allan, however, said "we have to be very careful that accused persons don't choose the judge they come before," adding he meant no disrespect to Judge Green.

Wood repeated his argument that Judge Green was familiar with the case.

Crown counsel Gordon MacDonald said he was prepared to go ahead but did not oppose the adjournment.

Judge Allan granted the request for an adjournment to Monday, adding "without agreeing for a second for your (Wood's) reason."

Fifteen men were arrested near Tofino by RCMP, assisted by armed forces personnel, one week ago. Thirteen tons of marijuana said to have a wholesale value of $20.8 million was seized, some of it on a ship and some ashore.

Judge Green earlier this week granted bail, ranging from $3,000 to $10,000, to five men and detained three in custody.

Every Day For Gorilla Sets Record

By GREGORY JAYNES
New York Times

PHILADELPHIA, — Massa woke up this morning and rubbed his rheumy eyes with great hairy fists. He got to his feet and, looking a little loose in the seat, shuffled out to greet the day.

By that act, Massa shattered another world record.

Massa's master, Steven Viola, assistant curator of mammals at the Philadelphia Zoo, provided the explanation: "No one knows how long a gorilla can live. So every day that Massa is with us, he sets a new world record."

It has been 47 years, the last 42 of which have been rather dull since Massa crossed the Atlantic and went to live with Mrs. Gertrude Lintz, who kept something of a menagerie on her two-acre place in the Bay Ridge section of Brooklyn.

Today, he scarcely has teeth enough to chew his own food.

But he lives. In the wild, a gorilla lives to the age of 20 or so. In zoos, a gorilla previously was reported to have lived to the age of 38. Massa is 47, looks every day of it and is headed for 50.

Massa's nascent days in America were pleasant. He was allowed to crawl upon the family billiard table and toss the balls about. He was taught to do light housework, dusting and sweeping, and he behaved on the up and up, never causing trouble.

In 1938, he went to the Chicago World's Fair, where he received critical acclaim for his work in the Gorilla Villa. That was probably Massa's benchmark year.

Apparently, the glory went out of his life the moment he found himself back behind a broom. Each day brought another dusty table top, another dusty floor. Then came an incident that cost him his job.

Dr. Ulmer tells the story:

"As I had gotten it, Mrs. Lintz was mopping the kitchen. It was wet and she slipped. Well, the mop went flying, and the handle struck Massa a pretty smart blow. Evidently, he thought he was being punished or she was attacking him, and he turned on her."

The gorilla sank his teeth into his owner's arms and legs until a crashing blow from an iron skillet addled his brain and stopped his jaws.

Shortly thereafter, he was sold to the Philadelphia Zoo for $6,000.

Diamond Convention For Victoria

The Canadian Diamond Drilling Association will hold its 1979 convention in Victoria in April, industrial development commissioner Barry Mayhew said Friday.

"There will be 300 people coming and assuming they stay four days this will mean $65,000 in visitor spending in Victoria."

The convention runs April 4—6 at The Empress.

Mayhew said the 1978 convention was in Halifax and the association decided to meet in B.C. in 1979.

"Really, it was between Vancouver and us. I had a number of meetings with Jeff Salton, their vice president, and they decided to come here."

Robeson In Line For Star After All

HOLLYWOOD — Ben Vereen, one of the stars of Roots, said Friday he will dedicate his own star on Hollywood Boulevard to the memory of Paul Robeson if the Chamber of Commerce stands by its refusal to give a star to Robeson, a controversial black singer and actor.

A sidewalk star bearing the name of Vereen, a black singer who played "Chicken George" in the hit television seriess, is scheduled to be unveiled in September in the stretch of sidewalk inlaid for blocks with stars bearing the names of movie, recording, radio, television and other personalities.

Robeson was embroiled in controversy for his politics. He advocated black rights and supported Communism and the Soviet Union, which led the State Department to revoke his passport in the 1950s.

The dispute over dedicating a star in his name has become the most controversial issue involving the sidewalk stars since the chamber's refusal for 16 years to dedicate a star to Charlie Chaplin because of his leftist political views.

Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley, who rarely pays any attention to Hollywood sidewalk doings, formally protested the chamber's decision, and actor Jackie Cooper threatened to have his own name removed from the walk unless Robeson was included.

What a Thing to Wake Up To!

CARDIFF — Can you pronounce Llanfairpwllgwyngyllgogerychwyrndrobwllllantysiliogogogoch?

Of course you can't. Neither can Corinne Rowlands, and she's Welsh born and bred.

Because she can't, Corinne, 43, has just given up her job as the radio announcer on traffic conditions for the Welsh service of the British Broadcasting Corporation.

The trouble is Corinne doesn't speak Welsh, and she finds some of the local place names — like Llanfairpwllgwyngyllgogerychwyrndrobwlllantysiliogogogoch, or even Penrhiwceibwr, or perhaps Machynlleth — don't roll trippingly off her tongue. Even simple names like Pwlldu — which the Welsh call Pooth-Dee — cause her problems.

Some people who speak Welsh don't believe their language should be treated lightly and have been complaining about Corinne's pronounciation.

"How on earth can I be expected to get my tongue around names like that first thing in the morning?" she said. "I'm giving up the traffic announcing."

MAN DIED FOR NEPHEW

SAN FRANCISCO — A California man gave up his life for his nephew by deliberately swimming away from a raft after they spent five days drifting at sea, the survivor's mother said.

Short of rations and delirious, David Lucas, 18, was picked up from the raft Thursday by the fishing vessel Rosa Oliva about 1,700 kilometres (900 miles) southwest of San Diego, the U.S. Coast Guard said.

Lucas told the coast guard by radio that he and William Quinlan, both of Arcata, Calif., took to the raft after their 40-foot sailboat capsized in a hurricane July 14.

Quinlan's wife, Vicki, said after learning of her husband's action, "It's a very heroic thing to do, sacrificing your life for someone else's. I'm very proud of that," she said, adding, that Quinlan clearly felt a responsibility for his nephew.

NATO Envoy

OTTAWA — Vice-Admiral J.A.Fulton has been appointed Canada's military representative to the military committee at NATO headquarters in Brussels, the defence department announced Friday. Fulton, 51, succeeds Vice-Admiral Robert Stephens, 54, of Victoria.

Wedding Bells For Charo

LAS VEGAS — Entertainer Charo, the coochie-coochie queen, has taken out a licence to marry a Swede from Los Angeles.

The Spanish-born blonde, who divorced bandleader Xavier Cugat three months ago, appeared late Friday at the Clark County Courthouse with Kjell Florentin Rasten, 38.

Charo and her fiance said they were not going to hold the ceremony immediately, but "keep it (the license) and fight for a while before getting married," said County Clerk Loretta Bowman.

3,000 ISLAND LOGGERS LAID OFF

Heat Closes Forest Firms

Layoffs in Vancouver Island's forest industry passed the 3,000 mark Friday and almost all logging operations were closed as continued hot, dry weather offered no relief from an extreme fire hazard situation.

Many logging roads and all hiking trails on the lower part of the Island were closed, as well as two of the major regional parks in the Greater Victoria area.

"We're starting to reach pretty well tinder-box conditions," said H.G. Doerkson, fire protection officer for the ministry of forests.

But although conditions on Vancouver Island were described as more severe than elsewhere in the province, where about another 1,000 persons are laid off because of the dry weather, there was only one major blaze covering about 100 acres of slash near Duncan.

By late Friday the fire was reported to be in the mopping-up stage, with about 55 to 60 firefighters involved.

"There are a number of small fires in other parts of the Island but none of any real consequence," said a spokesman.

Across British Columbia there were 99 fires burning, with about 800 men on the fire lines.

A spokesman for the Langford forest ranger's office, responsible for the Gulf Islands, all unorganized territory in the capital region and west as far as Sombrio Creek, reported a fire-free situation but said some "hot spots" where there had been recent fires were being kept under close surveillance.

She advised hikers and picnickers to use extreme caution if they are likely to be in wooded areas this weekend.

A MacMillan Bloedel spokesman in Vancouver said 12 Vancouver Island divisions employing more than 2,300 men were closed down Friday, with about 200 contractors' employees in the Port Alberni area also affected.

The only divisions unaffected by fire hazard closures were Port McNeill on the northern part of the Island and Kennedy Lake in the Alberni area, but the spokesman said Port McNeill was "iffy" by Friday.

The Caycuse operation of B.C. Forest Products Ltd., which had been operating at reduced levels since Monday, instituted an almost total closure Friday although a small crew was still engaged on dry-land sorting. About 225 employees have been laid off until the fire hazard is reduced.

"It's the driest we've seen it in years," said a spokesman.

BCFP's Port Renfrew operation has been virtually shut down since the end of June, but for the first two weeks of July the 290 employees had their annual holiday brought forward from August.

Manager Bob Beard told the Times it was decided Thursday to suspend all operations including road construction until the situation improves. About 285 men are affected.

Beard said the main logging roads from Port Renfrew to Shawnigan and Port Renfrew to Cowichan Lake remain open.

Only a few mechanics and dry-land sorters were still working Friday in the Ladysmith and Nanaimo Lakes operations of Crown Zellerbach, where 250 have been laid off.

Victoria parks director Cliff Bate said the wooded areas and pathways in Thetis Lake Park have been closed at the request of the Langford fire ranger, and only the main beach area remains open.

East Sooke Park, where a small fire that broke out Thursday was contained, is also closed.

A spokesman for the provincial parks branch said all hiking trails in the Malahat district covering the southern part of Vancouver Island and the Gulf Islands are closed, and no open fires are permitted.

"You can camp and you can picnic but you can't light a fire and you can't walk anywhere," the spokesman added.

Indians Block Sports Fishing

SQUAMISH (CP) — The Squamish Indian band has closed some prime steelhead fishing areas in British Columbia to sports fishermen.

The band has moved to control all fishing on streams on the 24 reserves it holds in North Vancouver and up Howe Sound and the Squamish River north of Vancouver.

Nineteen of the reserves are on the Squamish River, which every year draws hundreds of fishermen for the prized sea-run trout that swim upriver with the salmon.

A bylaw passed by the band last November and approved by the federal Indian affairs department gives the band control over the waters on the band reserves and some sports fishermen have already been prevented from fishing on reserve waters at the mouth of the Capilano River.

"We have to ensure the future preservation of our salmon stocks," said Dave Jacobs, the band fisheries co-ordinator.

"It's hard for some Europeans to understand the cultural ways of the Indians but that's what it's all about — protecting our culture."

Sports fishermen caught fishing the waters can be fined up to $100 in provincial court, Jacobs said.

At present, there is no official plan regarding enforcement of the bylaw but the Squamish band council is considering the matter and is expected to issue a statement in about a week.

Jacobs said he will meet with the federal fisheries department before the band takes any further steps.

The bylaw gives the band absolute control over management of all waters on the Capilano, Squamish and Seymour reserves as well as smaller reserves, some of which are not populated and are used for grazing.

The band has no control over waters outside of reserve boundaries, said Jacobs.

Jacobs said earlier this week that Squamish Indian band fisheries officers have already stopped several sports fishermen from fishing at the mouth of the Capilano but these fishermen were not charged with violating the bylaw.

Two Held In Store Robbery

Two men — one wanted for escaping the Jordan River prison camp — are in custody charged in connection with the robbery Friday afternoon of a grocery store in Esquimalt.

Roland Alexander Clermont, 23, no fixed address, and William Robert Lowe, 28, appeared in provincial court this morning and were remanded to early next week for plea.

They are jointly charged with armed robbery. Lowe is also charged with being unlawfully at large from jail.

Esquimalt police said the pair was arrested at 4 p.m. about half an hour after two men walked into Cheung's Low Cost Grocery, 811 Esquimalt, and, brandishing a knife, forced the proprietor to hand over about $100 from the cash till.

A nearby resident saw a man dart into an apartment on Carrie.

Four officers, guns drawn, entered the building and found Lowe in one of the suites. He surrended without struggle.

Clermont was nabbed walking on Colville Road about a block away.

Sooke RCMP identified Lowe as one of two men who walked away from the Jordan River camp late Tuesday night. The other was John Paul Sunstrum, 22, who still remains at large.

Air Crash Kills Five At Pender

A single-engine float plane crashed on take-off in Bedwell Harbour on Pender Island today killing all five persons aboard.

Names of the victims, believed to be Americans, have not been released.

A Rescue Centre spokesman said the plane, a privately owned Cessna 185, left Renton, Wash., this morning on charter to Rivers Inlet.

He said the plane landed in Bedwell Harbour to clear customs, but was redirected to customs in Pat Bay.

He said the plane apparently developed engine problems on take-off, crashed into the water and flipped over.

The mishap occurred shortly after 10 a.m.

A Coast Guard hovercraft and two other rescue boats as well as numerous pleasure craft raced to the area.

The plane, submerged with only the tip of its pontoons showing above water, was towed towards shore.

106 Guerrillas Slain By Rhodesia Troops

Times News Services

SALISBURY — Government troops have killed 106 nationalist guerrillas, including an unspecified number shot following a massacre by guerrillas of 39 black civilians in eastern Rhodesia, the military reported today.

The bulletin gave no other details and a military spokesman would not specify when the guerrillas were killed. It is reliably understood, however, that all died within the last 24 hours.

The guerrilla casualties are the largest number killed within Rhodesia to be announced in a single communique since the start of the six-year war.

Nationalist sources indicated the civilians killed were supporters of Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole, one of the moderate black leaders in the interim government rejected by the guerrillas. They were killed at a rally held by Sithole's faction of the Zimbabwe African National Movement in the Wedza region 130 kilometres east of here about two weeks ago, the sources said.

Meanwhile, Prime Minister Ian Smith today is considering the sharp rebuff given to his majority rule agreement by white voters in a Salisbury election Friday.

In the Highlands North constituency, Smith's Rhodesian Front party slumped to take only 49 per cent of votes cast, while opposition parties showed improvement.

If the result were to be reflected in the whites-only referendum promised by Smith on his plans for a transition to black majority rule, the plan would be rejected.

Another Draw

BAGUIO, Philippines (UPI) — World chess champion Anatoly Karpov and challenger Viktor Korchnoi battled to yet another draw today in the third game of their championship series.

WESTMOUNT SWITCHES

MONTREAL (CP) — It was a squeaky-tight vote but the city fathers of affluent Westmount have decided behind closed doors that Queen Elizabeth can have her Quebec maple syrup after all.

But they've cut Her Majesty's supply from the 10-gallon gift sent for the last 18 years to 2½ gallons.

At a closed-door meeting Monday, city council members voted 4 to 3 to reinstate the royal tribute in a less expensive manner.

Talks Resume

STE. ANNE-DES-PLAINES, Que. (CP) — Negotiations resumed at maximum-security Archambault Institute this morning between prison officials and two convicts who have been holding four hostages at knife-point since Thursday.

Sunfish Found Adrift

A 32-foot troller sought by police since last Saturday's massive marijuana bust near Tofino was found Friday partially submerged in the inner reaches of Hotham Sound in Jervis Inlet near Powell River.

RCMP Superintendent Scotty Gardiner said the Sunfish was discovered around noon adrift in the middle of the sound, its bow out of the water, by employees of a small logging company operating in the area.

Gardiner said there were indications an attempt had been made to scuttle the boat which slipped past police and armed forces personnel in thick fog during last weekend's raid in which 13 tons of high grade Colombian marijuana were seized and 15 persons arrested.

Ferries Running During LRB Probe

Both labor and management of the B.C. Ferries have pledged to keep the system operating normally while the Labor Relations Board investigates their dispute.

In binding orders announced Friday the LRB told the ferry corporation it must delay plans to suspend 27 employees until the LRB has determined whether the disciplinary action is appropriate.

The LRB also directed both sides to stay on the job.

Union president Shirley Mathieson said she was pleased the LRB had entered the dispute and workers have been advised to comply with the orders.

Employees had threatened to walk off the ferries to protest disciplinary actions by the corporation.

The threat came after B.C. Ferries general manager Charles Gallagher announced his intention to suspend union terminal chairman Bob Peacock for three months and 26 other union workers for three days for walking off the Queen of Coquitlam for four hours.

The union said it took the action to protest last of corporation action on union requests for additional staffing during the busy season.

Gallagher said the walkout was not justified and he ordered the suspensions, which were to begin Monday.

Instead, special LRB officer Bryan Williams will begin his investigation Monday and the suspensions have been delayed.

In announcing the LRB's decision to intervene, chairman Paul Weiler said:

"In view of the recent industrial unrest on the vessel Queen of Coquitlam and the board's clear sense that further work stoppages may well be precipitated — which would be in the interests of neither the corporation, the union, the employees, nor most important of all, that of the general public travelling on the ferry system — the board has decided that this is an appropriate case to impose binding interim conditions on both parties.

"The board wants it to be clearly understood that these conditions are legally mandatory."

SIGN CLAIMS BOYS GUILTY

VANCOUVER — Four boys aged seven to 10 have been publicly branded shoplifters by a Vancouver store — even though they have not been charged.

Their names are listed prominently on a cardboard sign just inside the entrance to Phil Tarn's Salvage Bargain Store at 1458 East Broadway.

The handwritten sign says: "This store is off limits to the following for stealing." The boys' full names are listed below. The name of a fifth has been scratched out.

Store owner Phil Tarn said Friday night that the list has been up for three months and claimed he had approval of all four boys' parents.

"We are not a kangaroo court here," he said. "The father of one of the boys knew they had been stealing from my store and brought all of them to see me.

"He wanted me to do something ... A lot of customers say its a fantastic idea."

Tarn denies it is against the law to publish names of juvenile delinquents.

B.C. Civil Liberties Association president Jim Dybikowski said Friday: "This kind of thing is bad enough in the case of adults but these are juveniles and are subject to the juveniles delinquency act; he (Tarn) is wrong in his interpretation of the act.

"Section 12, subsection 3, says no report of a delinquency committed or said to be committed shall be published without the consent of the court. On the face of it, this list amounts to publication of their names."

Theatres Shut, Still Talking

Both sides were studying proposals this weekend aimed at ending the projectionists' strike at Odeon and Famous Players theatres in B.C.

The projectionists struck at noon Friday, putting all but two movie theatres in Victoria out of operation.

Only the Towne theatre on Douglas and the Quadra at Quadra and Hillside are not involved.

Famous Players manager Doug Gow, chief negotiator for the theatres, said talks have not broken off. He said proposals presented Friday by both union and management were being studied over the weekend.

A total of 86 B.C. theatres are affected in the first full-scale strike since projectionists organized 64 years ago.

The 113 members of the B.C. Projectionists Union went on strike in a dispute over wages and automation, which they say could cut out half the available jobs.

The employees were in a legal position to strike July 14, having served 72-hour strike notice the previous Tuesday. However, at that time they said no action would be taken pending further talks.

Negotiations resumed Friday, but had continued only a short time before the walkout took place.

Indians Act On Tahsis Mill Pollution

GOLD RIVER (CP) — Area residents and workers at the Tahsis Co. Ltd. pulp mill here say they have been breathing noxious fumes from the mill for the past 10 years, but now the local Indian band has decided to take action against it.

The Nootka band council passed a resolution this week to enact a bylaw restricting contaminants from the mill, which sits on band-owned land near their homes at this community on Vancouver Island's west coast.

"Since 1973, we have tried other quiet means of resolving this problem, but have made no headway," said band chief Mary Johnson. "We are extremely concerned about health problems suffered by our people that appear to be linked to massive environmental contamination."

Paul Griffiths, Tahsis Co. technical assistant, said the smoke stacks of mill pump out clouds of saltcake, flyash, steam, soot and gas mixtures of hydrogen sulphide, chlorine dioxide and bivalent sulphur compounds.

He said a mixture of sulphur dioxide and other sulphur compounds is produced at an average of 800 parts per million (ppm) a day, and peaks at 1,500 to 2,000 ppm.

The provincial pollution control branch has repeatedly called for a permit level B, which allows no more than 20 ppm of bivalent sulphur compounds every eight hours, to be applied to the plant.

The pollution control board recently granted Tahsis an additional two-years deferral on installation of major pollution abatement works.

The Dec. 31, 1978 deadline for the installation was changed to 1980 after the company pleaded financial difficulties. Tahsis estimates the cost of clean-up and control mechanisms in the millions of dollars.

The Union of British Columbia Indian Chiefs, which represents 45,000 native people in B.C. covered by federal treaties, passed a motion Thursday lending "its strongest support to the Nootka band in their struggle against the pulp mill."

Jim Brisebois, the Nootkas' advisor who acts for trade unions and Indians on environmental matters, said:

"The Indian people just can't take any more. They were forced to move near the pulp mill to get jobs but all they got was pollution."

Workers in the mill, represented by Local 11 of the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada (PPWC), are angry at what they see as the rising incidence of gassing, a direct exposure to concentrated gas vapours.

Boat Race in Ends Tragedy

GRANDE CACHE, Alta. (CP) — A young Mexican's dream of winning the first world championship river boat race ended in tragedy Friday in the glacier-fed waters of Smoky River in western Alberta.

Martin Beruete Solis, 23, of Mexico City died instantly when his jet boat hit a canyon wall at about 128 kilometres an hour.

The mechanic's craft, Miss Jetka No. 323, was taking part in an eight-kilometre qualification run for the race which starts today.

Two other members of the crew, also from Mexico City, were injured and sent to hospital in Edmonton, about 350 kilometres to the east.

Guillermo Dominguez Sanmilan, 23, the boat's pilot, was credited with saving the life of his father, Guillermo Dominguez Delagarza, 58, the nagivator.

Race organizer Bill Hayward said the younger Dominguez, who suffered a broken arm and leg, swam through the rapids to rescue his father to shore before collapsing himself.

Dominguez Sr., who suffered leg injuries, was reported in serious condition in hospital but was expected to survive.

"I had to help him," Dominquez Jr. said before being flown to Edmonton with his father. "I could see he was injured and didn't think he would make it by himself."

It was the second consecutive year that the race, which has just been given world championship status, claimed a life. Last year, Hans Schenk, 36, of Edmonton died in the 900-kilometre race.

Dal Lewis, 21, of Calgary, in a support boat, was one of the first to reach the scene of the accident.

"We heard the roar of the engine die to an idle only after 40 seconds after the start and went to investigate," Lewis said.

"The boat had been taking an 80-degree lefthand bend in the river when it struck the outside wall of the canyon. Jagged rock, which looked like fibreglass, had been broken off at the point of impact."

Late Friday, the ill-fated one-ton white Mexican boat was pulled from the river.

"The crew had invested some $15,000 in the boat," said George Garcia, 23, a mechanic with another Mexican entry.

"The men thought they had a real chance in their first Canadian river boat race and made the drive up from Mexico two days ago in high spirits. They came in third last year in the Mexican Rio Balsas international race."

Grant Handle, president of the River Boating Association of Alberta, said all participants know "there is a risk of death in any dangerous sport" and the race will go on despite the tragedy.

With Miss Jetka out of the race, 30 boats from Canada, the United States, Mexico, New Zealand, Britain and West Germany remain in the race to compete for nearly $50,000 in prize money. The race ends in Edmonton July 30.

Liberated All The Way

QUEBEC (CP) — Sexually liberated couples are apparently in favor of a liberated Quebec, says a story in the monthly magazine of the intergovernmental affairs department.

The story is an adaptation of a report in a University of Quebec magazine on the research of sociologist Jacques Lazure into the lifestyles and attitudes of 75 "new" couples—young men and women between the ages of 18 and 30 who live together for an average of two years without being married.

"Politically, 80 per cent of the men and 85 per cent of the women who make up these new couples are in favor of Quebec's independence," says the last paragraph in the two-page story.

Lightkeeper Pay Boost

OTTAWA (CP) — The keepers of foghorns and lighthouses have voted to accept a new contract that will raise the minimum pay to $12,518 a year.

Most of the 530 employees, represented by the Public Service Alliance of Canada (PSAC), will earn between $12,518 a year and $13,353 a year under the new agreement.

Average salaries under the old contract were between $11,918 and $12,753 a year.

The one-year contract will expire Dec. 24.

GLASSHOUSE NEXT!

OTTAWA (CP) — Nine Mounties got their man early Friday morning after he literally dropped in on them when he fell through the roof of a glass greenhouse at the Governor-General's official residence.

Police said a man was spotted early Friday walking erratically on the grounds of Government House. When an RCMP officer ordered him to stop, he scrambled up the greenhouse to escape. He crashed through the roof, causing about $150 damage.

As he sat dazed after the fall, he was arrested by nine Mounties.

Greenpeace Invokes Ancient Nfld. Law

CORNER BROOK (CP) — Charges of violating an old Newfoundland law which prohibits sealing on Sunday were laid Friday against the captains of two sealing vessels by Patrick Moore, president of the Greenpeace Foundation.

The charges against Jim Gillett of St. John's, captain of the Arctic Endeavor, and Ulf Snarby, skipper of the Arctic Explorer, were laid in provincial court here.

Moore brought similar charges earlier this week against Captain Morrisey Johnson of the vessel Lady Johnston Two and John Lundrigan, Progressive Conservative member of the Newfoundland legislature for Grand Falls.

The charges were laid under a section of the Seal Fishery Act, a statute passed in Newfoundland before it became a Canadian province in 1949.

The three skippers and Lundrigan are charged with killing seals on Sunday, March 12.

Gillett and Snarby also are charged with bringing into the port of Dildo, Nfld., seals killed on a Sunday, also contrary to the Seal Fishery Act.

The maximum penalty under the statute is a fine of $2,000. Any ship involved in a conviction also could be forbidden to take part in the seal hunt for up to two years.

Moore was here to be tried in provincial court on a charge of interfering with the seal hunt on March 18. Judgement was reserved in the week-long trial which ended Friday.

Cut CLC Ties, Unions Urged

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canadian unions need to break away from international unions and the United States-dominated Canadian Labor Congress to gain autonomy, according to Jess Succamore, national secretary of the Canadian Association of Industrial, Mechanical and Allied Workers.

Succamore, a spokesman for the Confederation of Canadian Unions, says U.S. control of this week's Canadian convention of construction unions in Toronto is an example of why "we've got to shed the yoke of U.S. domination."

He says officers of the British Columbia and Yukon Building Trades Council are angered that the chairman of the two-day convention was an American who appointed the 17-member board of the new Canadian building trades organization.

If Canada is to be independent from U.S. economic control it needs an independent trade union movement, Succamore claims.
